Mother Nature complicates '82 Pa. corn crop

BY DONNA TOMMELLEO

LANCASTER — Governor Dick Thornburgh and Pennsylvania farmers maintain a vigil these lays for an answer to Thornburgh's request to USDA for special disaster funds to assist producers in the aftermath of early frost and drought which crippled the state's corn crop.

Sixteen northwest counties sustained heavy frost damage in late August, while at the same time many southeast farms experienced an extremely dry period.

According to John Yocum, senior research associate at Penn State's southeast research farm in Landisville, Lancaster County received only 1.10 inches of rain in August instead of the normal 5 inches.

"The month of August is critical for corn production," Yocum said. "From silking on you'd love to have about one inch of rain a week."

On the plus side, the dry weather didn't encourage a surge of leaf diseases, which thrive in moister conditions.

Nevertheless, the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service estimates this year's grain harvest to be six percent below normal. In 1981, an average acre produced 96 bushels while 1982 figures point to 92 bushels an acre.

The heavy rains in parts of southeastern Pa. this spring and early summer (eight inches in June) did account for a spurt of growth early in the season, said Yocum.

In addition, cloudy ceilings produced taller plants. As a result, corn harvested for silage will produce a slightly better yield.

"We don't know what the TDN will be on those yet," he said.

"But from the time the corn was planted, we've had lower than normal temperatures. We didn't have the heat units so the corn is about one to two weeks late," explained Yocum.

"The more use you can make of a full growing season the better it is for any plant," he added.

For many farmers in northwestern Pa., the growing season ended abruptly on August 29 with a killing frost.

According to Extension agronomist John Baylor, the crop

Barges benefit So. Jersey

SALEM, N.J. — In an effort to expand their soybean markets via barges, a group of South Jersey farmers has attracted a few non-agriculture industries to their small city, said a Salem County Extension agent.

"The idea of a port opened everybody's eyes," commented Extension agent David Lee. "The city now has committments from six large industries."

Lee explained the Salem Redevelopment Authority has hired a consultant to look into the possibility of maintaining a permanant port in the South Jersey city, which is located along the banks of the Delaware River. Current committments, said Lee, include bids from gravel, sand, container and tugboat firms to name a few.

Before May 1982, soybean producers had a limited amount of markets that were accessible only by road, said Lee. The idea of using barges would avail the farmers to "an abundance of other markets," he added.

However, the concept met with an "abundance" of skepticism from all involved.

"Nobody thought we could do it," he recalled. So, last May, Lee and the soybean producers organized their first shipment out of the Salem port to "show people it could be done."

The group used an unorthodox style of loading the barge. Farm augers were brought in and moved the beans from tractor trailers into the moored barge.

"We worked around the clock for three days," said Lee. Any skepticism that prevailed was probabably washed away as the first soybean-laden barge was successfully launched from the make-shift Salem port in May.

To prove the idea was still viable, Lee organized a second shipment, expected to shove off today. This time, however, several dignitaries, including the Governor and State Agriculture Secretary of New Jersey, are

Egg producers say no to increased assessment

WASHINGTON, D.C. — When the tedious task of tallying up all the U.S. egg producers' votes was finally accomplished, results of the national egg referendum found commercial producers voting down the proposed changes in their research and promotion program and increased assessments by a "substantial margin," reported USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service director H. Connor Kennett this week.

According to Kennett, only 41 percent (representing 38 percent of commercial eggs produced) of 1,225 producers who voted in the referendum cast their ballots in favor of program changes.

Kennett announced the program will continue unchanged at 5 cents for each 30-dozen eggs marketed. The proposed addition of two consumer members to the 18-member American Egg Board was

Lebanon Holstein breeders honor Gem-Rock founder

BY SHEILA MILLER

MT. ZION — Lebanon County Holstein breeders paid recognition to Elmer H. Dutweiler, the 82-year-old founder of Gem-Rock Holsteins in Lebanon County.

Grandson Kenneth Sellers, who is carrying out the farm operation under the Gem-Rock prefix, accepted the award for Dutweiler presented by Lebanon Holstein president Ken Mase Tuesday evening during the club's annual banquet. Dutweiler was unable to attend since he is recuperating from a lengthy illness. He currently resides at the United Christian Church Home, north of Annville.

In making the presentation to Sellers, Mase said Dutweiler was considered "everybody's grandpa" since the Lebanon County Holstein breeder could always be found at shows and sales "leanin' on a broom or pitchfork — always helping out."

Dutweiler has been Lebanon County Holstein Club's nomination for Pennsylvania Hall of Fame during the two years when the breed's state convention was held in the southeast district, explained Mase. Although he was not selected for the state award, Dutweiler became Lebanon County's first "Hall of Fame" award winner.

Commented Sellers on accepting the award for Dutweiler, "This will probably bring tears to his eyes when he sees it (plaque)."

The Lebanon Holstein Club also presented an award post-humously to Frank Reist Sr. who died unexpectedly. Accepting the plaque in memory of their father were Reist's three sons.

Junior members who received production awards included:

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

OCT. 18-24, 1982

It's a joy to gaze on these beautiful days.

Set new trees now. . . Pablo Casals died Oct. 22, 1973. . . First quarter of the moon Oct. 24 (Sun.). . . Average length of days for the week, 10 hours, 49 minutes. . . "The Star-Spangled Banner" first sung Oct. 19, 1814. . . Swallows leave San Juan, Capistrano, California, this week. . . Painting the pump doesn't clean the well.

Ask the Old Farmer: One line in the sea chantey "Blow the Man Down" goes, "Give me some time to blow the man down." What specific situation or action does that refer to? S.F., Holland, Mich. It simply means to set a pace that leaves the other fellar out of breath.

Home Hints: Hot vinegar will remove paint from glass

Spreading yourself too thin

Anyone who has ever had to sweat over physics books, memorizing boring laws and ancient physicists in fear of failing the next exam, will surely remember one very important law of nature — that for every action there is an exact-opposite reaction. Don't ask me which physicist discovered it, though, because I just simply can't remember. (I guess I didn't "sweat" enough in science class.)

I do remember enough about the physics law, though, to know it not only applies to physical reactions that occur in experiments, but to events that can be witnessed almost every day on farms throughout the country.

Actions and reactions on the farm — what are we looking for? Well, for instance, take the action and complementary reaction of what happens when a farmer gets too involved in the rat race of "bigger means better."

The action of buying more land, bigger tractors, milking more cows, farming more acres brings with it the reaction of less money in the bank account, less time with family, and less time to properly take care of livestock and fields. Everything and everyone (except the banker) suffers.

Unfortunately too many farmers are caught up in this drive to take on more work, whether for financial gain or just personal satisfaction. But while they may be getting the "steal" of a lifetime when they purchase that additional farm just 10 miles down the road, they're actually "robbing" themselves and their families. With more acres to farm or more livestock to feed, there'll be a inversely proportional amount of time available for the farmer to spend resting and relaxing with the family.

We've all heard the saying, "All work and no play . . ." and that applies to farmers, too. Quality time spent with the family, playing together, can make the long hours of working on less pleasurable chores much easier to accept.

According to Delaware Extension family living agent Pat Wilson, time is possibly the resource most demanded of parents. "It takes time to teach children, to show them love, and to discipline them. In fact, every aspect of parenting demands time, and these demands can restrict other necessary activities.

"Parents must be especially careful when planning time use. Children should be high on the list of priorities."

Although most of us claim that a farm is the best place to raise children because they learn responsibility and patience through taking care of animals, it isn't the best place if their parents are working out in the fields or in the barns from dawn to long after dusk.

Not only is that kind of schedule hard on kids, it's tough on farmers. Workhorses usually have four legs and die at the age of about 30, but some farmers go through life trying to emulate their equine counterparts. Some would seem to prefer an oats bag over their face instead of sitting down to a nice evening meal.

When some farmers finally decide to take some time to spend with their children, it's usually too late — the kids are grown with farms and families of their own.

Still other farmers never slow down to enjoy their families, even when their bills are paid and the necessities for spending long hours in the field have disappeared. That's when these farmers find a "bargain" to buy, putting them right back into the banker's debt for another decade.

That old law, "You can't teach an old dog new tricks," would probably apply to the workaholic farmers who refuse to learn how to enjoy life and their families. A lifetime of hardwork has marked them with callouses and stiff kneejoints along with a fear of taking it easy.

Is it worth it? Is the biggest farm with the most acres tilled and the largest herd a true sign of a successful farmer? Even though that would seem to be the measuring stick that's used to determine a farmer's true worth, bigger is not necessarily better. It may be just a sign of spreading oneself too thin. To find out, just ask the family.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

AT THE FOOT OF THE MOUNTAIN
October 17, 1982

Background Scripture: Exodus 32:1 through 34:10.
Devotional Reading: Exodus 20:1-17.

Those who insist that the words in our Bible are the literal words of our God should have some grave difficulties with the story of Moses and his encounters with God on the mountaintop. For the picture we get of the Lord in this story is a picture that is obviously somewhat distorted by very human perceptions.

For example, according to this story in Exodus, God speaks and behaves in a very human fashion when he learns that the people of Israel have been worshipping a golden calf. God is so angry that he says, according to Exodus, "Now therefore let me alone, that my wrath may burn hot against them and I may consume them" (32:10). This is not the God revealed to us by Jesus in the New Testament. What we are witnessing here are very human reactions to the sins of others.

Moses Besought The Lord

As Exodus portrays this encounter, it is only the arguments of Moses that persuade God to give up his anger and forgive the people of Israel. A man is persuading God to rise above human anger!

And, according to Exodus, Moses was successful in causing God to change his mind! "And the Lord repented of the evil which he thought to do to his people" (32:14). The writer of Exodus would have us believe, not only that God changed his mind, but that he was sorry for the way he had felt toward them.

How ironic that, immediately after Moses persuaded God to forgive the people of Israel, he himself must be persuaded to cool his anger and forgive the people. This time it is Aaron who does the reasoning with Moses: "Let not the anger of my Lord burn hot" (32:22). These are virtually the same words which Moses was said to have spoken to God. (The writer of Exodus seems to be suggesting that it was man who taught God to forgive, rather than the other way around.)

Down The Mountain

Yet, despite this, the story tells us something very important about forgiveness: it is one thing to talk about it in the rarefied atmosphere of a mountaintop. It is something quite else to bring that lofty concept down to the foot of the mountain where the people are. That's where it really matters, for that's where sin is. That's where failure is, rebellion—you name it.

Sometimes it seems to me that we Christians have a hard time bringing forgiveness down the mountian. We proclaim it from our pulpits, we teach it in our Sunday schools, we pray it in the Lord's Prayer, but often at the foot of the mountain it seems as if we have left it on the upper slopes. We come to worhsip services and go home with our angers and resentments basically undisturbed. We pray, "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors," knowing full well that there are certain "debtors" whom our grudges have never let go.

Mt. Sinai, it was revealed to Moses by God, but it wasn't until he came down to the foot of the mountain that he came to understand.

To Store Corn Carefully

Corn harvested for grain is a very important crop for most farmers. Therefore, good corn storage is very important. It should be protected from the weather, given proper ventilation for drying, and then protected from rodents. This latter menace is one that needs more attention on many farms. Mice and rats like to make their homes in corn cribs and storage places when given the chance. Make an effort to eliminate all nesting places and practice good sanitation to keep the population down. All rat baiting stations should be located where children and pets can not come in contact with the bait.

Rats and mice are distructive and are costing farmers a great deal of money.

To Utilize Corn Fodder

Corn growers who are not making the crop into silage might consider the making of the corn stalks into bedding materials. The market value of all livestock bedding is quite high, and can be used on the farm or sold to others. After the corn is picked and the stalks dry, the corn can be shredded and baled.

This material makes very good bedding for box stalls and feed lot pens; the fodder absorbs water rapidly and when shredded gives less trouble in mechanical handling. When used on the farm as bedding, it can still be returned to the soil as added organic matter.

To Practice Good Public Relations

Farmers should be concerned about their image in the community. In most cases it is very good, and also the majority of non-farm people in the rural areas respect the needs and problems of the farmer. The image can be improved by getting better acquainted with your non-farm neighbors.

We urge farmers to invite their nearby neighbors to see their farm operations. In many cases a better understanding of the various farm operations will eliminate disputes and hassles about noise and odors. Also, I would encourage farmers to become involved with community activities.

To Save Your Leaves

In the fall, people are busy cleaning up the yard - raking the leaves and burning all the leaves and garden refuse. But this is a mistake - especially if you're interested in having beautiful plants and shrubs around your home and in the garden.

It's better to "leave the leaves" and make a compost pile. When leaves and branches are burned, all their soil-building properties are lost to the air. What's more. that good smelling smoke just adds to the air pollution problem.

I'd suggest raking the leaves from the lawn and piling them neatly in a corner of your garden. Add a little soil and fertilizer to speed up the rotting process. Other garden refuse that isn't diseased can also be added to the pile. And after a year to two — when it's well rotted — you can work this material into your garden to enrich the soil.

OUR READERS WRITE

Individual dispute

With the exception of the portrayal of me as a Pennsylvania Farmers' Association attorney, Debbie Koontz's article "Farmers Battle Threat from NFO" (Lancaster Farming, Oct. 2, 1982) was basically accurate. However I must object to the editorial "Battle of the Bullheads."

I am an attorney with S. Paul Mazza & Associates, State College and we are the attorneys for the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association Legal Service plan. We are not employees or agents of the PFA and all legal work from our office is done on an individual attorney/client basis with all legal fees borne by the individual clients.

NFO's dues collection efforts came to my attention through approximately 12 farmers across the state. My work to stop the NFO collection efforts has been for the sole benefit of each individual farmer whom I represented without any consideration to its effect, positive or negative, on the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association.

While I applaud any support my clients may have received or will receive from the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association, this dispute will continue as one between individual farmers and the National Farmers' Organization and nothing more.

I fear that your characterization of this matter as a PFA/NFO dispute will only serve to enhance NFO's position in what was characterized as the NFO "exploiting the farmers it says it represents."

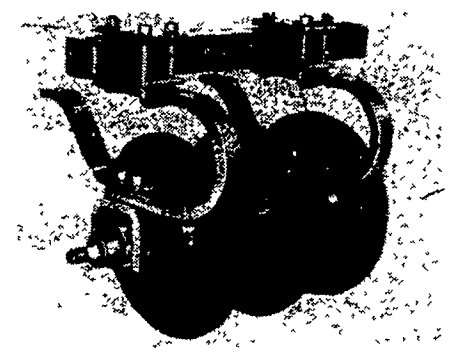
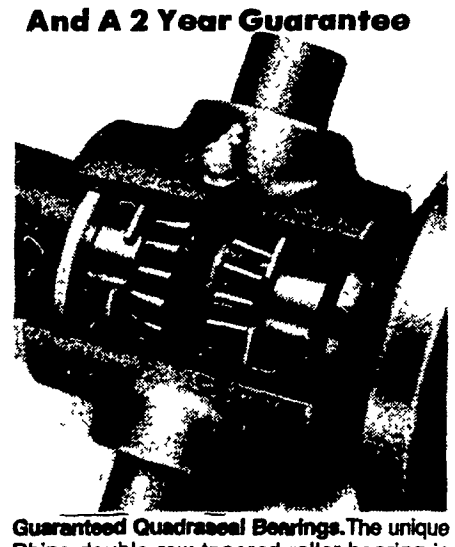
Very Important Features You Should Consider:



Spring Bearing Hangers reduce shockloads to the blade, axles, bearings and frame when working in fields with rocks or stumps. The Rhino 1" x 2" spring bearing hangers provide maximum strength, add protection, and reduce downtime expenses. The Rhino Quadraseal gang bearings are trunnion mounted to the spring bearing hangers to allow the gangs to flex freely without undue stress being placed on the gang axle.

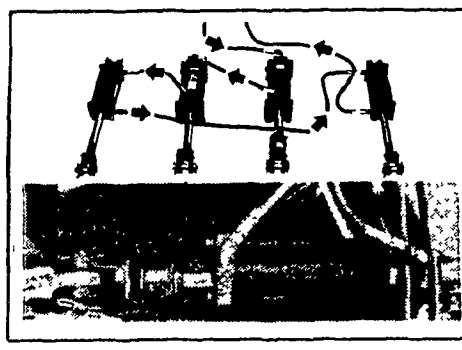
Wing Flotation. Rhino Flex 90B wings are hinged so that they provide uniform weight distribution and flex freely to follow the ground contour for uniform plowing. For better side-to-side leveling, the wing hinges are mounted 16" inside the center section to give a more parallel flexing action between center section and wing disc blades.

More Bearing Width Means MORE SUPPORT And A 2 Year Guarantee



Guaranteed Quadraseal Bearings. The unique Rhino double-row tapered roller bearing is guaranteed for two years and provides greater life and dependability than competitive bearings. The Quadraseal double row tapered roller bearings offer more capacity than single row ball bearings. With this extra capacity, the probability of overloading — even when discing at maximum angle — is virtually eliminated. The double-row bearing has a triple-lip seal that runs on a hardened, polished surface and has a heavy steel seal protecting washer to protect the seal from damage due to wire and trash. Between the steel washer and the seal is a cavity filled with grease — an additional sealing element against dirt. The double-row tapered roller bearing is mounted into a rugged cast iron housing which is trunnion-mounted to a spring bearing hanger. As the trunnion-mounted bearing housing pivots, the bearings and axles remain in perfect alignment and the gangs roll freely. This bearing package is designed to give years of trouble free, long life operation.

It's The Best!



Slave Hydraulics — Adjustable Depth Control. Slave hydraulics provide simultaneous action of all cylinders when raising or lowering. This action assures you of a uniform plowing depth, no matter what the soil conditions might be. Plowing depth can be set precisely by adjustment of a depth stop on the master cylinder.

Disc Spacing. The Flex 90B is available with 7½" or 9" disc spacing or a combination of 9" front, 7½" rear. All gang components are shipped completely assembled. No matter what your tillage needs are, the Flex 90B can be equipped to handle your requirements.

- Heavy Duty Scrapers
- 22" Rhino Disc Blades
- Tapered Discs/Cover Discs. Three disc blades of step-down pattern from 22" to 20" to 18" and the 16" cover disc, on the rear gangs, give you a smooth, level, ridge-free job. Another RHINO advantage. It's all standard equipment.

No one cares

Why does the news coverage of the 4-H State Horse Show contain only the first place winners? You ignored the children who received Reserve Champion in all 33 performance classes and have done all the others who placed up to eighth place a feeling that no one cares about their placings.

We rely on your paper to print complete results.

Mrs. Irene Brown
Waynesboro, Pa.

Only listed first

I know some 4-H members from Cumberland and Dauphin counties received placings at the 4-H State Horse Show but you only listed first place winners. We think your paper should give results up to sixth place.

Bill and Candy Long
Carlisle, Pa.

Do a better job?

Who is the idiot who reported on the 4-H State Horse Show and who did not give complete results?

The 4-H provides complete results to the papers who request them. The State Office said your reporter doesn't bother getting the reserve champions or the other placings.

If that reporter can't do a better job, please get the 4-H office to provide you with complete results. They will be glad to give you a complete list of placings.

George Mohn
Newville

Editor's Note - Our Oct. 9 issue of Lancaster Farming featured the 1982 State 4-H Horse Show champions with the most coverage space allotted to this show for the past several years.

We provided three full pages for more pictures and the listing of top winners this year, as compared to less than two full pages in 1980 and 1981.

Pictures and show results were provided to Lancaster Farming by Penn State's Agricultural Communications office. We published the information we received in its entirety, and used as many of the 94 champion photographs as space allowed.

Lancaster Farming greatly appreciates the "above-the-call-of-duty" effort the Penn State crew puts into covering this three-day event, snapping and processing pictures of each 4-H champion and compiling a complete listing of champions.

As Lancaster Farming expands its coverage area, trying to publish as many fairs and shows as possible within our set amount of space, we have found it necessary to limit the depth of listed results depending on the size of the show. Beginning January 1 we will be limiting show results to three placings, maximum.

While we agree that everyone who participates in shows and other events are "winners," only one person can claim first-place.

AIR PATTERN and MOVEMENT

This is the key to excellent ventilation. Twelve individual adjustable nozzles control air direction up and down, the length of throw and velocity. The length of throw is crucial in avoiding down drafts at the walls. The velocity ensures proper mixing of air at the ceiling level, uniform temperature and proper air motion at the livestock or poultry level. This air pattern once set never changes.

Slaughter Steer and Heifer prices advanced sharply in day-to-day trading, ending the week near 5.00 higher as compared to previous week's close. Demand by most interests proved excellent, with many buyers purchasing cattle for immediate Slaughter needs.

Overall quality grade and dressing percentages quite attractive with YG 2-3 represented in fairly large numbers. Y.G. 4 still fell under some pressure, but percentages of these kinds not particularly burdensome. Cows steady to 1.00 higher, most advance on Utility and Commercial. Bulls fully steady.

Low soybean oil prices prompt campaign

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The American Soybean Association has launched a major campaign to boost soybean income through soybean oil sales.

"We're drowning in a sea of surplus soybean oil," ASA President Charles Hamon said in a letter to ASA members. "A 1-cent a pound change in soybean oil prices changes soybean prices as much as 32 cents a bushel. During the past year alone, the drop in soybean oil prices has reduced soybean prices about 80 cents a bushel.

"U.S. farmers are suffering from devasting effects of high production costs — especially interest rates — and low prices. While the association can't directly affect the negative impact of interest rates and other external factors, we can help reduce the high surplus of soybeans and soybean products."

Hamon, a Kansas farmer, said ASA has launched a three-pronged campaign:

- A research and education program to expand the use of soybean oil as a crop oil in the formulation of agricultural chemicals and as a replacement for water as a carrier for agricultural and forest chemicals. If this acreage was sprayed using soybean oil, Hamon said, these uses could consume as much as one billion pounds of soybean oil yearly.

The surplus currently amounts to about 1.5 billion pounds.

- A worldwide effort to expand consumption of soybean oil. This includes specific projects in Asia, Latin America and Europe designed to expand consumer use of soybean cooking oils and margarines. A silimar effort doubled Germany's consumption of soybean cooking oils. The campaign also includes an extensive education and promotion program to expand European consumption of full fat soybean livestock feed which would reduce the oil surplus. The feeding program, which involves using crushed soybeans as a replacement for soybean meal, could increase soybean oil consumption in Europe 10 times to two billion pounds.

- A national program to increase the industrial use of soybean oil. ASA has contacted major U.S. companies encouraging them to replace petroleum oil with soybean oil in chemical formulations. In addition, the association is encouraging the use of soybean oil, or perhaps soybean lecithin, as a dust suppressant in grain handling. This could use another 500 million to 1 billion pounds of soybean oils yearly.

"Unlike my father's generation, today's farmers are involved in an internationally-oriented agriculture," Hamon said. "Increasing sales represents one way farmers can help themselves. There are no instant solutions to this farm depression. But, we believe our actions will position soybeans for a speedy recovery be building a foundation to boost soybean profits."

MILK MARKET NEWS

Federal Order 4
November Class I climbs

Middle Atlantic Order Market Administrator Joseph D. Shine announced a Class I milk price of $15.24 per hundredweight for November 1982. This price is up two cents from the October price and is at the same level as last November's Class I price.

Order No. 4 prices are announced for milk testing 3.5 percent butterfat f.o.b. plants located within 55 miles of Philadelphia, PA and also within 75 miles from the nearer of Washington, DC or Baltimore, MD. There is also a 6-cent direct-delivery differential applicable to producer milk received at plants located within 55 miles of Philadelphia.

Shine announced a Class II milk price of $12.54 per hundredweight for September 1982 and a butterfat differential of 17.1 cents for the month. The Class II milk price is down two cents from August while the butterfat differential increased one-tenth of a cent.

These class prices are based on the September 1982 Minnesota-Wisconsin manufacturing milk price of $12.46 per hundredweight at a 3.5 percent butterfat content.

The USDA reported that the wholesale price of Grade A butter at Chicago for September was $1.4835 per pound and the nonfat dry milk price was $.9347 per pound, f.o.b. plants in Chicago area.

Federal Order 2
August milk brings $13.59

Dairy farmers who delivered milk to Order No. 2 handlers during August 1982 were paid on the basis of $13.59 per hundredweight. This uniform price was nine cents less than a year ago.

The payback under the seasonal incentive plan, which begins with the August pool, enhanced the uniform price by 36.0 cents per hundredweight.

Although producer receipts were higher than in August 1981, the increase was minimal, less than one million pounds (0.1 percent). Total receipts this year aggregated 898.9 million pounds.

There was a slight decrease of one and one-half million pounds in the amount of milk used for fluid milk products.

As a result of these changes, the Class I utilitzation of 39.7 percent was just under last year's utilization of 39.9 percent; that had been the lowest August percentage in the history of the Orders.

The gross value to dairy farmers for milk deliveries during August 1982 (which includes differentials required to be paid to farmers but not voluntary premiums or deductions) was $122.5 million.

The Class I and Class II prices for August 1982 were $14.67 and $12.54 per hundredweight, respectively, down $.17 and $.03 from a year ago.

Horticultural exchange unites children of two countries

WASHINGTON, DC — This September and October, children across the United States are taking part in a unique scientific and cultural event.

The U.S. National Arboretum, a 444-acre USDA Agricultural Research Service facility in the nation's capital, is asking parents and teachers to encourage their children to help the Arboretum in the collection and exchange of one million seeds of the American flowering dogwood for an equal number of Japanese flowering cherry tree seeds.

The United States' most popular spring-flowering trees, the American dogwood and Japanese cherry have been cultivated here since 1731 and 1876, respectively. In the last 65 years, however, the vigor of our cherry trees has declined, according to National Arboretum botanist Roland M. Jefferson. Only one autumn and three spring varieties are still widely grown. Japan, on the other hand, has hundreds of cultivated forms.

To save America's flowering cherries, the Arboretum has launched an ambitious program of research, exploration, and cherry introduction. Led by Jefferson and funded through government and private donors in both countries, the effort has met with great success. In a highly publicized, five-month, national Japanese program, school children helped Jefferson collect more than on million flowering cherry seeds.

The collection contains 50,000 seeds from trees growing in the volcanic ash of Mt. Fuji, which last erupted 400 years ago. Seeds from such an unusual spot encourage Jefferson. "The amount of variation in the trees was remarkable," he said. "The more genetic mutations we can collect, the better our options when developing superior trees for the United States."

In exchange, American children this September and October will collect one million seeds of what many deem out most beautiful tree, and the American flowering dogwood. The National Arboretum will send the seeds to Japan, where some will be used immediately for research while the remainder will be planted on Japan's mountainsides. There, the dogwoods will become a part of the environment and a future source of genetic material—and pleasure.

To participate in this lasting, international project, follow the guidelines below or contact the Dogwood Exchange, U.S. National Arboretum, 3501 New York Avenue, N.E., Washington, D.C. 20002.

To collect seeds from the American Flowering Dogwood: This September and October, when the fruit of your neighborhood dogwoods ripen and turn dark red, have your children gather the fruit by picking it or shaking the branches. Collect as soon as the seeds turn ripe to prevent too many from being eaten by birds.

Only clean, air-dried seed can be sent to Japan, so the pulpy fruit must be washed off or rubbed away from the stone or seed. When washed in water, the pulp and empty stones will float way. The clean and then air-dried stones are what's left.

Each batch of cleaned seed should be identified by the city and state where it was collected, and whether the tree was growing wild or was part of someone's yard or a park. As soon as the seed is ready, send it via the mail to: Dogwood Exchange, U.S. National Arboretum, 3501 New York Avenue, NE, Washington, DC 20002.

The seed will be sent to Japanese scientists who will use some of it to develop new dogwood varieties especially suited for Japan. The remainder will be planted in the wild on hillsides where it will be enjoyed by generations to come.

ROLL YOUR BALES ANY WAY YOU WANT 'EM

Total Density Control (TDC) lets you vary bale density to match moisture conditions

Gehl large round balers put you in total control of bale density and size. You can bale any hay crop, from legumes to grass hay. And most crop residues. Even in tough conditions. And you can actually control the diameter and weight of your bales.

Gehl's unique, patented Total Density Control concept makes it all possible.

When your hay crop is at the right moisture content, you'll roll 'em tight all the way. Just one big, heavy bale.

But when conditions are tougher, you adjust. Increase the core size. Change the wrap density. Or both.

Power-Feed Throat for fast positive bale starts

Our Power-Feed Throat with aggressive hay pickup gives you quick bale starts and allows you to travel at fast ground speeds. This positive feed flow is a real advantage in tough baling conditions.

The bottom line: increased bale quality...more bales per hour.

Gehl round balers are available in two sizes. They're ideal for tight, heavy bales. Or low density bales. And everything in between.

We put good ideas to work

Thornburgh signs prime agricultural land policy

HARRISBURG — Last Friday Gov. Dick Thornburgh signed an executive order establishing a prime agricultural land policy under which all state agencies are expected to take every step possible to preserve prime agricultural land in Pennsylvania.

Thornburgh also announced the creation of the Bureau of Agricultural Development within the state Department of Agriculture, and charged it with the responsibility of promoting the agribusiness interests of the state's rural community and serving as an advocate for Pennsylvania farmers.

"The executive order complements our previous and ongoing efforts to keep prime farmlands in agricultural production," the governor said.

In the executive order, Thornburgh directed that no state funds or federal grants administered by the state be used to remove prime agricultural lands from farming. He also authorized the secretary of agriculture to identify prime agricultural lands in the state.

"This Commonwealth's abundant supply of agricultural lands has for generations sustained farm families, family farm operations, rural communities and, ultimately, the people of Pennsylvania and this nation," the governor said. "It is in our best interest that this policy be established to preserve these farmlands."

Thornburgh said that the reorganization of the Agriculture Department, under which the new bureau was established, also locates the State Horse Racing Commission within the department (as mandated by Act 135 of 1981) and realigns several administrative offices and divisions.

Formerly the Bureau of Rural Affairs, the new Bureau of Agricultural Development will be organized into the divisions of:

* Economic-Development. This division will serve as liaison between the agribusiness community and government agencies. It also will assist the development and expansion of businesses in the state.

* Agricultural Exports. Working with farm and food industries—this division will encourage the development of products for overseas markets. It will also provide specialized services to improve prospects for foreign marketing of Pennsylvania food products.

* Farmland Preservation. This division will work to preserve farmland resources, privately owned, as well as state-owned farmlands under the Agriculture Department's jurisdiction.

Chester Farmers hold annual meeting

WEST CHESTER — Members of the Chester/Delaware Farmers' Association, voting at their recent annual meeting in Oxford, elected directors, adopted county policy recommendations and received awards for both Association's and individual member's activities.

Re-elected directors are: Elmer Mast, Parkesburg; Richard Breckbill, Oxford and Art Yocom, Elverson. Harold Bryson, Oxford, was elected to replace Lat McClellen.

Members voting on policy recommendations developed at local meetings throughout the county, took action or supported: the establishment of a fresh mushroom marketing order; studying the possibility of establishing a rebate program for the dairy industry based on reduced milk production and administered at the local level; that mushroom compositing be classified as agricultural; that the Immigration Reform Bill should not be passed in its present form.

Members also recommended that: PFA continue to oppose the Business Use and Occupancy Tax; support agricultural sales tax exemption; that health insurance for the self-employed be tax deductable; and that state, county, township and school districts balance their budgets by reducing spending not by increasing taxes.

PennDot will be asked to adopt drop-type spreaders and eliminate spinner spreaders for application of salt or other de-icing materials to highways, and reconsider the issuance of and charges for, permits for weight-limited bridges.

It also was recommended that PennDot contract for competitive bids for services or else improve efficiency of management and work crews.

Members were concerned about the use of chemical sprays for gypsy moth control. They encouraged the reliance on natural controls with the use of Bacillus thuringiensis when a spray program is used. They also urged the continued inspection of Christmas trees and cord wood shipped from quarantined areas.

The recommendations that present PFA policy on alcohol-related traffic accidents be made a priority issue, that able-bodied public assistance recipients be used in work programs such as cutting weeks and brush on highways, and members encourage greater responsibility and accuracy in news reporting, were passed.

Voted down was a proposal to support the concept of education vouchers issued to parents and useable at the school of the parent's choice.

These policy recommendations will be presented at the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association Nov. 7-10 in Hershey.

Roy Christian, Hamburg, PFA board member, presented Richard Steel, county president, with the award for outstanding accomplishmend for the year. Individual awards went to Janet Robinson, Oxford, newsletter editor; Albert Bartels, West Grove, policy development; Richard Breckbill, member relations; David Hodge, West Grove, public affairs, Portia Breckbill, Oxford, woman's committee chairman; Barclay Hoopes, Landenberg, local affairs and Marshall Haws, West Chester, information director. Other awards were given to the members of the public affairs committee — Peter Collins, Charles Gable, Mrs. Thomas Emery, John McCausland, Stanley Guest, Joel Calvin, Harold Pyle, Willis Hocking and Ann Bates. Harold Kulp was recognized for his work with the PEP committee.

Milk for the dinner was furnished by Roy Kolb, Pottstown. Clint Blackwell of Toughkenamon, furnished the mushrooms.

Larry Landis, Oxford Area FFA member related his experiences at the PFA summer institute in Lock Haven. Vivian Ragni, Gradyville, Apple Queen, served cider and Marilyn Stoltzfus, Atglen, Dairy Princess, served milk punch to the group before the dinner.

Leon Wilkinson, Landenberg, introduced Chester County legislators Sam Morris, Joe Pitts, Eleanor Taylor and Earl Smith. Robert Thompson, commissioner and Larry Boling, director of Administration, represented the County Commissioners.

Agri-business's supporting the program with exhibits and information materials were Agri-King, Agway, American Mushroom Institute, Custom Farm Seeds, C.B. Hoober, Lamb's Farm Machinery, Oxford Greenline, PFA Insurance, Safemark Products, Stoltzfus Farm Service and White Horse Grain.

Tom Merroth, Guthriesville, membership chairman, announced that there are 280 paid members for 1983. The new membership program will be starting in another month.

Cattle 'shrink' causes found

COLUMBA, Mo. — Studies of cattle on the way to market show that up to 4 to 5 percent of body weight can be lost in the first few hours of transport.

That "shrink" is due more to confinement and fasting than to transportation, said Malcolm Asplund, University of Missouri-Columbia animal scientist.

"Holding animals in close confinement without access to feed and water causes as much or more shrink than does hauling them," he said.

Be cautious

UNIVERSITY PARK — If you cut firewood for use in your home, there are certain safety precautions which you should take, says Dennis Murphy, Penn State Extension safety specialist.

An accidental injury suffered while cutting, splitting or stacking firewood in preparation for the heating season could erase any potential savings.

Murphy says to follow instructions in the operator's manual when using a chainsaw. Also, grip the saw firmly with both hands and assume a stable stance. In addition, he advises checking the wood for knots and nails that could cause the saw to kick back.

Murphy also recommends the following safety tips from the National Safety Council.

- Wear a hard hat, goggles and sturdy gloves. Ease stress on hearing with acoustic earmuffs or plugs when using chain saws.
- Before felling a tree, check the area around it. Notch the side on which it is expected to fall and make the felling cut about two inches higher. Shut the saw off and remove it before the tree falls.
- When limbing, cut limbs on the topside before removing branches resting on the ground. Use an ax or handsaw when cutting small limbs.
- Keep handtools sharp. Check handles for soundness and keep bystanders safely away.
- Wear safety goggles when splitting wood. Stay clear of moving parts and pinch-points.
- Watch your step when carrying and stacking wood. Don't carry, lift or toss more than you can comfortably handle.

Use Devrinol® now and hit spring weeds when they're down.

selective herbicide

The mulch you use on strawberries this fall has weed seeds and volunteer grain. Left unchecked, they'll germinate to cause problems next spring. Once these seeds sprout they cannot be controlled by residual herbicides. But Devrinol herbicide, applied now—before you mulch—will stop weed germination in the spring. Use Devrinol preceding rain or snow and prior to ground freeze, then apply mulch. You won't have to worry about weeding, or weed competition, all the way to picking time.

expected to be present for launching ceremonies.

In five short months, South Jersey soybean producers have expanded their markets, previously limited to Philadelphia, Townsends, Del. and Purdue, Md., to more than twice as many major ports along the Mid-Atlantic, Lee reported.

Today's loading still will include farm augers, but now three 15,000-bushel farm grain bins have been added.

Interest in the endeavor not only attracted outside industries, but Lee reported that soybean producers from Pennsylvania and northern New Jersey have contacted him, as well. The majority of the soybean producers have included those from the South Jersey counties of Salem, Gloucester, Cumberland and Atlantic.

Currently, the farmers conduct business through a one-time limited partnership per 45,000 bushel barge-load, said Lee.

"They get together and evaluate and pick the best market and barging prices," he explained.

Eventually, the farmers hope to organize a marketing co-op which will operate under the moniker, Salem River Grain Co-op.

Hog production cycles changing

NEWARK, Del. — Hog production cycles are changing, but much more slowly than anticipated, says University of Delaware Extension marketing specialist Carl German.

Historically, hog production has run in four-year cycles — two years of increasing production followed by two years of decreasing output. Because the only evidence of a change is in the last cycle, German says it's premature to say these four-year cycles won't continue, but there are signs such productions wings are getting longer.

The up and down movement in the cycle traditionally occurs because of what German calls "in and outers" — people who go into hog production when it's profitable and get out when prices go down.

"Now we're getting more units with sophisticated facilities and a large capital investment," he says. As a result, more growers are reluctant to get out of production when it's less profitable. As the proportion of producers who fit this category increases, production cycles will tend to be longer. But this isn't happening as fast as some observers predicted.

Marketing strategies depend on production cycles, so hog farmers should be aware of the cycles and adjust their operations as these become longer, German says. It's extremely difficult to anticipate them. But producers should at least examine what's happening to the market when planning their marketing strategies.

Farmers who are expanding our building facilities should know where they are in the cycle, the specialist says. Building too early in a low cycle could be a mistake because it could be a long time before the unit becomes profitable.

Dean Smith addresses Northern Tier farmers

BY JANE BRESEE
Staff Correspondent

TOWANDA — Sam Smith, Dean of Agriculture of Penn State, spoke to a crowd of 125 farm and community leaders from the Northern Tier Region at the Wysox Presbyterian Church Monday. The meeting was sponsored by the Penn State Advisory Council as a means of increasing understanding between the people of Pennsylvania and the College.

Dinner followed a reception hosted by the staff of the Northern Tier Region Cooperative Extension. Veto Barziloski, member of the Extension Executive Committee from Wyoming County, acted as Master of Ceremonies and introduced the dignitaries present including Rep. Roger Madigan, (R-110th).

Alfred Durand of Bradford County, treasurer of the Master Farmer Organization, presented a check to Smith for $448 to be added to the fund to build the Ag Arena at Penn State. The monies were collected from the Master Farmer picnic held this summer in Bradford County.

Penny Ann Smith of Tioga County, Miss Penn State College of Agriculture, also was introduced. Penny is a junior at Penn State with an outstanding background in 4-H participation. She also is Pennsylvania Holstein Girl.

Smith's address cited statistics about the importance of agriculture and ag-related industries in the Northern Tier. Sales of farm products bring more than $207 million dollars into the five county Northern Tier region furnishing 112 ag-related businesses employing more than 1,400 people with annual payrolls exceeding $15 million, he related.

"The Cooperative Extension Service is the most effective delivery system of information in the world, Smith said, "and it is not just for farmers anymore. It is mandated by law to provide services to other people as well."

"This has not been a good year for farmers," Smith said. "Business and industry are depressed. But I see some good coming out of it. The agriculture industry will ride it out through sheer determination. They have the land, the work ethic, markets, and auxiliary enterprises. They will tighten their belts and come through.

"The ag industry of the United States is the single greatest economic force in the world," Smith maintained. "But they need to pay attention to marketing, predicting and utilizing new products and alternatives to products, in order to succeed in the future."

The meeting adjourned after a number of questions about enrollment in the College of Agriculture. Smith stated there are serious problems with admission procedures, but prospective students from rural areas are inclined to apply too late. Applictions should be made before Nov. 10 of the year prior to admission.

AGWAY answers your needs

Should you invest in a farm operation?

UNIVERSITY, PARK — By selecting the right lender, a farmer can determine how effectively credit will help him, say Extension farm management specialists at Penn State.

The availability of credit and how it helps meet capital needs in good and poor financial times can be affected by the lender. Just as the lender wants to know about the borrower, the borrower should have a knowledge of the lender. Compare lenders for:

—Interest charges and other fees—Have credit terms been adapted to modern agriculture, such as amount needed, repayment length, and security required?

—Does the repayment plan correspond to your cash flow?

—Is there a deferred payment clause in low income years?

—If income is high, can a loan be liquidated ahead of schedule without penalty?

—Can the lender provide credit in both expanding and tight financial periods?

—Can he provide short-, intermediate-, and long-term loans?

—And, does the lender have farming experience-can he look realistically at financial statements, budgets, and projected plans to help in planning credit needs? Can he say no when an investment does not appear sound?

The ten-lesson course is available by sending $9.25, (including handling) to PART-TIME FARMING, Dept. 5000, University Park, PA 16802. Make check payable to PENN STATE.

GET IN CONTROL
OF YOUR MANURE PUMPING OPERATION

When it comes to fall planting time, you want to get the manure out of the pit or lagoon and onto the fields in a hurry. No fooling around. No pampering the manure pump.

That's why farmers like you turn to the Slurry-Brute manure pump from US Farm Systems of Pennsylvania to get the job done. With the Slurry-Brute, a large propeller stirs up a storm in amazingly thick manure solids. And a cutting knife slices straw and other materials into manageable pumping lengths. Many farmers can agitate up to one million gallons in only two hours. That means you save hundreds of dollars in fuel costs and tractor operating time. When you're ready to load, you can fill a 3,000 gal. tanker in one and a half minutes.

With the Slurry-Brute, you control all this action with a lever control panel mounted for easy operation from the tractor seat. The levers operate as follows:

Lever 1, changes the direction of the rugged propeller and cutting knives independent of the nozzle direction (a patented feature) to churn the slurry from the bottom to the top.

Lever 2, changes nozzle direction to spray circulating slurry all the way from left to right.

Lever 3, changes nozzle height to spray circulating slurry close or far across the lagoon or pit.

Lever 4, changes valve from circulation to load when you're ready to fill the tanker.

So get in control of your manure pumping operation. Write for free brochures to US Farm Systems of Pennsylvania, 4020 Blue Ball Road, Nottingham, PA 19362. Or phone (301) 398-2948.

Scientists battle European corn borer

By Joan Easley

NEWARK, Del. — Agricultural scientists go to great lengths to slow down a destructive insect like the European corn borer. In the 1940s they went to Europe in search of natural controls.

There they found several insects that parasitize the corn borer. They brought these insects back to the United States to see if they would establish themselves and keep U.S. corn borer numbers down.

The one that seemed most promising was a hungry little fly called Lydella. For the next several years it did a creditable job of controlling corn borer populations in Delaware and other corn-growing states in which it had been introduced.

During the 1960s, however, Paul Burbutis, University of Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station researcher who was heavily involved in the Lydella project, discovered that for unknown reasons the parasite had disappeared in this country.

Burbutis decided to try again. He and two researchers from the nearby U.S. Department of Agriculture Beneficial Insects Laboratory, Larry Ertle and Richard Dysart, imported thousands of European corn borer larvae from Yugoslavia. They knew that about 10 percent of the borer larvae in that country carry the Lydella parasite.

To find out which, though, they had to raise all the larvae to maturity and wait for the parasites to emerge. In the interest of safety, they carried out this work in the quarantine facility of the USDA lab.

They released Lydella in Delaware and New Jersey in 1974, 1975, and 1976. However, winter checks of the fields during 1975 and 1977 failed to turn up any surviving Lydella. The researchers decided their attempt to reintroduce it had been a failure.

During a routine corn borer survey in 1978, however, a few Lydella parasites turned up. Encouraged, the researchers employed a student, Nate Erwin, to conduct a systematic search throughout the state. He found a few more surviving pockets of Lydella.

Since 1979, Lydella has continued to multiply and spread throughout Delaware. Other corn-growing regions, encouraged by Delaware's success, would like to reintroduced the parasite too.

University of Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station researcher Charles Mason has agreed to try to reintroduce Lydella to Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, and possibly Minnesota. He's working with mid-western entomologists to learn why Lydella disappeared in the first place so it won't happen again.

Past experience and a search of the literature have given Mason a few hints that may help insure the success of the midwestern reintroduction attempt. The evidence seems to indicate that Lydella is better able to survive near large bodies of water. This is probably because Lydella also parasitizes the stalk borer, an insect that feeds on grasses common to wetter areas. For that reason Mason will release the parasites near water.

Whether he succeeds or fails in his initial attempt to re-establish the parasite in the Midwest, Mason will pay close attention to what happens in hopes it will help him understand the factors that led to the parasite's first disappearance. If the parasite fails to reestablish itself, he hopes to find out why. And if it succeeds, he will want to know what factors influenced population numbers.

Agricultural conditions vary from year to year. Farmers switch varieties and chemicals, and the weather changes. Any of these factors could have caused Lydella's disappearance.

Mason is considering the possibility that a change in corn varieties caused the problem. Lydella deposit their young as living larvae at the base of the entrance hole to the corn stalk created by the corn borer. But they refuse to do this on some corn varieties, perhaps because these lack certain chemical attractants that other varieties possess. Midwestern scientists are pursuing this line of research.

There are other possible explanations for the parasite's disappearance. Perhaps environmental conditions became less favorable to Lydella and more favorable to one of its ecological competitors — such as a disease organism or another parasite of the European corn borer. Even more complicated, nature has created a miniscule wasp that parasitizes the Lydella fly. A change in environment could have allowed the wasp to thrive at Lydella's expense.

To test whether a chemical may have caused Lydella's disappearance, University of Delaware graduate student Bob Leighty is feeding sublethal doses of insecticide to corn borers in the laboratory. Some of the borers in the experiment are parasitized by Lydella. Leighty wants to learn whether a dose of insecticide that is only slightly harmful to the borer could be fatal to the parasite. If so, entomologists will have to reconsider pest control recommendations so as to maximize Lydella's chance of survival.

Wherever possible scientists prefer to rely on nature's own pest control mechanisms such as Lydell instead of chemicals. Now through the efforts of University of Delaware and USDA entomologists, Lydella is back on the job in Delaware. With a little luck it will soon be back at work in the rest of the United States, and scientists will know what to do to keep it there.

University of Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station researcher Charles Mason checks for corn borer damage in hopes to re-introduce the corn borer parasite Lydella to the Corn Belt.

Egg referendum

voted down with the referendum.

Egg producers turned down an increased assessment to 7.5 cents for each 30 dozen eggs sold, with annual increases of 0.75 cent until a 10-cent maximum was reached.

A two-thirds majority vote or a simple majority of the producers representing at least two-thirds of the commercial eggs produced was required for the referendum to pass.

According to the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation, an estimated 79 percent of the eligible producers in Pennsylvania voted against the referendum. In their October newsletter, the Federation speculated the causes of the defeat include "economics of the industry, a backlash of small producers against the large, integrated complexes, and failure of the American Egg Board to develop new approaches in promotion."

The Federation went on to point out "the key (to the referendum's failure) may center around the lack of incentives to invest in an industry that is getting a reputation for being unprofitable."

Executive Director John Hoffman stated, "I have no doubt that the uncertainty of the future of the egg industry caused some producers to vote no when they would have preferred to vote yes. We are in sympathy with such producers, but we may have taken what seemed to be a necessary action for the moment at the expense of long-term prosperity."

Balance soil fertility

UNIVERSITY PARK — Balanced soil fertility is the key to the economic production of high quality crops. Unbalanced soil fertility — acid soils, too little or too much of one plant nutrient compared to another — can reduce both crop yield and crop quality.

Managing soils to create a balanced soil fertility condition begins with a good soil test. The soil test should measure:

- soil acidity and lime requirement;
- phosphorus level;
- potassium level;
- calcium level;
- magnesium level.

For some areas, particularly sandy or high organic soils, the soil test should also measure levels of the important micronutrients (boron, zinc, manganese).

After learning the fertility status of the soil follow the soil test recommendations to bring the soil into a balanced fertility condition. Don't try to skimp.

Proper liming builds the foundation for a productive soil. If you fall short in your liming program, you can expect the rest of your soil fertility building to collapse. Under these conditions, applied fertilizers are not used as efficiently by plants. Toxic elements in very acid soils also adversely affect plant growth, and poor nutrition leads to weak plants that suffer from insect and disease attacks.

After building a strong soil fertility foundation by proper liming, apply the needed fertilizer. Again, follow the soil test and apply the proper balance of plant nutrients. Some soils may need only one or two plant nutrients, and may require varying application rates.

A balanced soil fertility program is one that applies only what is needed and in the amount that is needed. Start your program now with a soil test. Kits are available from your local county Extension office.

Local volunteers receive kudos at Leaders' Banquet

LANCASTER — It takes a special person to be a volunteer — a true altruist and extrovert; someone so concerned with the welfare and happiness of others and of future generations, that they devote their own time and energies without being asked or paid.

Lancaster County's 4-H program has more than 500 of these junior and senior volunteers who serve in the capacity of leadership for almost 4,700 4-H'ers in 136 clubs. On Tuesday they were honored for their years of effort and caring, during the annual Leadership Banquet, at the Farm and Home Center in Lancaster.

"I Dare You" awards are given to 4-H'ers who have realized some of their goals as encouragement to continue the achievement. This year's winners are Gerald Garber and Valerie High.

Receiving only the second such award ever presented in Lancaster leadership history, was Mrs. Dorothy Fry of Rl Stevens who earned a five-point diamond cloverleaf pin for 40 years service to 4-H.

Mrs. Fry has conducted the Better Bakers Club, a home ec/baking club, at her home for the duration of her service, and has served on the 4-H Development Fund board.

The 40-year leader is a retired school teacher and part-time librarian at Our Mother of Perpetual Help School in Ephrata.

The only other leader to receive such a distinction is the late Victor Longenecker who served for 42 active years as the Elizabethtown baby beef club leader.

In addition to Mrs. Fry's recognition, over 45 other leaders were recognized. Two more impressive lengths of service were accomplished by Mylin Good of Mt. Joy, and Mrs. John Nissley of Elizabethtown, with 35 years.

Good has served his years with the Red Rose Baby Beef Club, and Mrs. Nissley works with the community club.

A list of other leaders awarded during the banquet follows below.

Because the leaders devoted their time to 4-H, it seemed only appropriate that 4-H'ers share in the festivities. Two of these participants — two who have reached the goals they set for themselves — were given "I Dare You" awards by Extension 4-H agent Donna Lucidi. The award is designed to offer the accomplished recipients a continual challenge to uphold their positions.

Valerie High was chosen for the award for her work with the Boots and Saddles Club and the Horse Production Club. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hoffman of Landisville.

Gerald Garber's "I Dare Award" comes in honor of his varied 4-H work; including serving as president of the Golden Guernsey Club and co-president of the County Council.

For years of dedicated service to the Lancaster County 4-H program, these leaders were awarded clover pins and special recognition at the annual leaders' banquet. In the foreground is Dorothy Fry of R1 Stevens who has instructed a baking club for 40 years. On the left is Ruby Nissley, Elizabethtown, who earned a 35-year pin, joined by Mylon Good of Mt. Joy with the same number years of service. Photos courtesy of Lancaster Intelligencer Journal, Barry L. Zecher, photographer.

Leaders receiving awards for their years of service were Mrs. Lewis E. Bixler, Milton Brubaker and Lester M. Weaver for 29 years; Elmer Boyd and Mervin Peifer for 28 years; Carl Nestleroth for 27 years; Jay Nissley for 26 years; Elvin Hess Jr. for 24 years; Kenneth Eshleman, Anna Geyer, and Mrs. Woodrow Good for 23 years; Ruth Andrews, Harvey High and Eleanore Nelson for 21 years; Nettie Bare, Elam Bollinger, Evelyn Hess, and Clarence Stauffer for 20 years; Clyde Brubaker, William Dean, Dorothy Denlinger, JoAnn Enders, Albert Goss, Mrs. J. Warren Heisey, Carl Longenecker, Fran Sauder, Verna Mae Walton, and Jason L. Dairylea joins API, markets grow

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — While this week's annual meeting of Dairylea Cooperative, Inc., which attracted nearly 1,000 people, produced no major alterations in policy, co-op officials, however, informed members of a few significant marketing changes.

According to Dairylea spokesman Bruce Snow, the co-op contracted a franchise agreement with H.P. Hood of Boston, Mass. One of the largest dairies in New England, Hood has agreed to process and market Dairylea ice cream, while paying out a franchise fee to the co-op.

The move was spurred by Dairylea's decision to shut down and sell their 60-year-old Utica, N.Y. ice cream plant, which currently employs about 60 people.

After several attempts to update the Utica plant, Snow explained the plant continued to demand "too much capital involvement." Within the week, the plant will halt its manufacturing operation. A portion of the plant, however, will remain open to market the co-op's inventory.

In other marketing moves, Dairylea announced it will become the fourth member of Atlantic Processing, Inc. of Allentown. API will market milk under the Dairylea trade name in the northeastern Pennsylvania region. The three additional API members include Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative, Lehigh Valley Farmers' Cooperative and Mount Joy Cooperative.

In the past year, Dairylea also has entered marketing agreements with Upstate Milk Cooperative, Inc. and Agri-Mark, Inc. Upstate, said Snow, markets Dairylea brand products throughout western New York while Agri-Mark markets Dairylea milk in the New England region.

While a rumor has circulated of a possible Dairylea and Agri-Mark merger, Snow, reported that Dairylea general manager Robert Hall answered, "We are holding a whole series of meeting with Agri-Mark to determine areas where we can further cooperate to make money for our members." —DT stages in the frosted area varied from early milk stage to dent. The recommendations handed down from the Extension was, in a word, ensile.

Pa. corn crop

In fact, most of the Extension memos read:

"The corn that was frozen on August 29 should, for the most part, be going into the silo. If it was in dough stage or even late milk, much of it will continue to mature and dry out.

"In some cases, the grain may have lower bushel weight or the cob may be loose. If in doubt about it drying out, put it into the silo if you can.

"Making a stock on the ground is also a possiblility if you feed it. If you do not have livestock to feed, you may want to consider selling it as high moisture corn or as silage.

"Each field will have to be evaluated on its own merits."

Because much of the corn will be harvested early, Baylor explained that higher moisture levels may exist. Due to the moisture, some regions are now experiencing an onslaught of fungi.

Alternaria fungi, which quickly moved in following the frost, grows on the dead portion of the stalk or leaves and readily comes off. The fungi causes a black appearance to the leaves and in some cases causes a black cloud when it is harvested.

While Penn State plant pathologists have reassured farmers the fungi condition will not cause any problems in feeding the silage or grain, they urge caution when harvesting the damaged crop.

The indiviudal harvesting the corn should take precautions to prevent breathing the dust. An air conditioned cab or a cab with a filter would suffice. If not possible, the harvester is urged to wear a respirator or face mask.

High moisture also may call for many farmers to artificially dry the corn. Baylor noted that this will have little effect on nutrition or total yield but could have a major effect in the pocketboooks.

The recent move by Governor Thornburgh could alleviate some of the financial hardship. Thornburgh's request for a "Secretarial Emergency Disaster Designation," would make farmers in affected counties eligible for loans of up to $500,000.

The Farmers' Home Administration would grant loans at eight percent interest to help recover operating and production losses.

Counties damaged by the premature frost are: Armstrong, Butler, Cambria, Clarion, Clearfield, Crawford, Elk, Erie, Jefferson, McKean, Mercer, Potter, Somerset, Sullivan, Tioga and Venango.

"Farmers in these counties are facing the prospect of losses in feed crops and cash crops," Thornburgh wrote. "These farmers face the added economic burden of purchasing additional supplies for their livestock and dairy cattle to keep them fed through the winter. County Emergency Boards agree that the inital surveys of damage may well be underestimated and that losses will increases as the harvest is completed."

Thornburgh has also requested a similar designation from U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block for Cumberland county, where it has been estimated that 700 of the county's 1,500 farmers will suffer reduced yields due to drought conditions.

So now it all boils down to a "wait and see" game. FmHA spokesman Marlyn Aycock confirmed that Thornburgh's request has reached Block's "operations." The Secretary is expected to turn over the request to the FmHA for extensive evaluation and cross-checking. Once completed, FmHA will submit their findings to Block for his final okay.

Nutritionists will have to wait for more results from silage samples from the northwest before making additional reccomendations.

According to Barrie Moser, Penn State forage data analysis, samples have been coming in at a slow rate.

"We actually got less samples for the whole month of September. We were expecting more," he said.

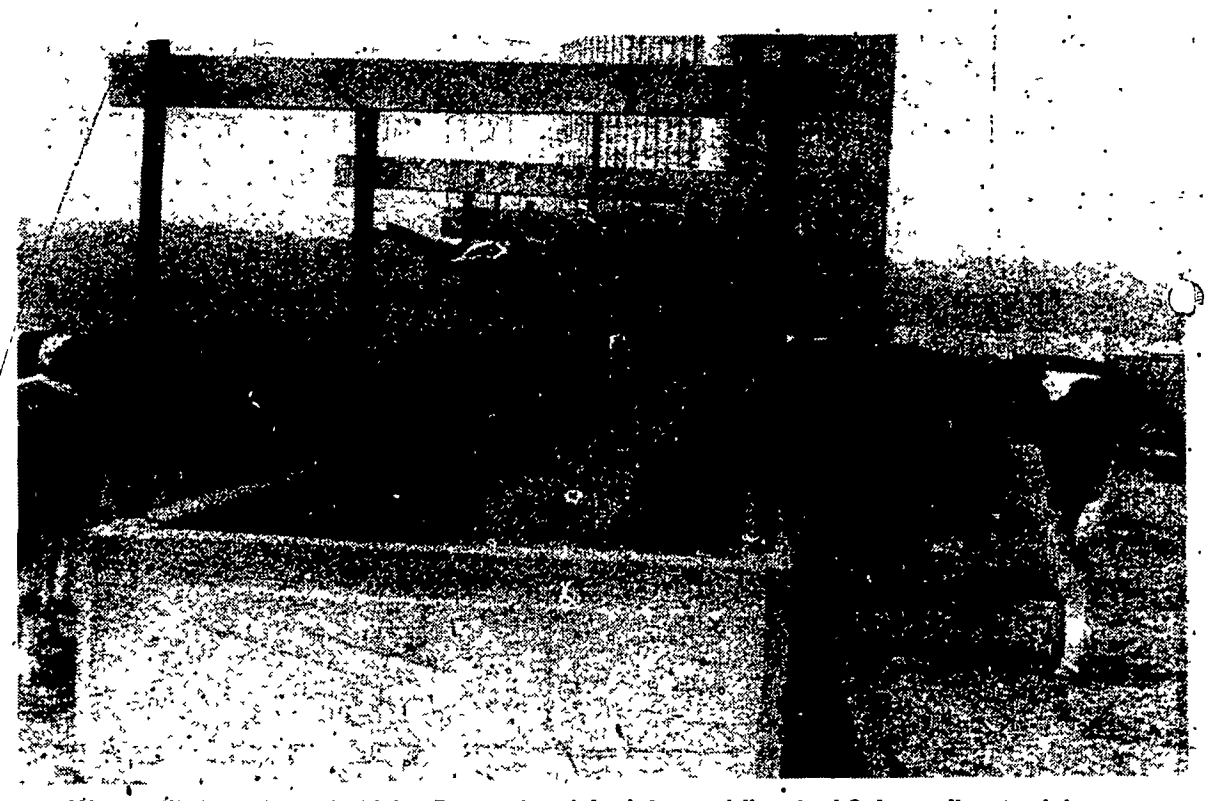
Agway fieldman Ralph Briggs, whose territory includes the battered northwest and part of New York state explained that approximately 20 percent of his tested ear corn samples have not made quality status.

Briggs added that a trend in the corn has indicated slightly lower energy levels, as well.

He summed up the general attitude of his clients in a word, "depressed."

For the next few weeks while farmers, nutritionists and even the Governor wait, it's a sure bet Mother Nature won't.

More corn, originally planted for grain, will find its way into the silage bunks of several dairies in northwest Pennsylvania. But nutrition experts note there isn't much difference in the feeding value of silage from a whole grain plant than that of one harvested at milk stage.



What will this winter hold for Pennsylvania's dairy and livestock? According to dairy Extension specialist Dick Adams, the farming community will have to wait a few weeks longer for the answer before silage sample results start rolling in from the frost-damaged northwest counties.

Heinz calls on president to limit mushroom imports

KENNETT SQUARE — Saying the People's Republic of China must be prevented from dominating the American mushroom market, Senator John Heinz (R-Pa) last Saturday called on the president to provide import quotas to protect domestic producers.

Speaking with reporters in the heart of the U.S. mushroom industry, Heinz explained that "only through import quotas can we control the enormous surge of Chinese mushroom imports and allow American producers to compete effectively in the market place."

In a letter to President Reagan, Heinz pointed out that the International Trade Commission had recommended import quotas twice in the last two years. But the Carter administration chose to impose a tariff instead.

"The PRC, as a Communist country not subject to the profit and loss considerations that exist in free economies, simply absorbed the tariff increase," Heinz said. "This meant their price remained low. Taiwan and Korea, the other major producers, were driven from the market, and the U.S. was flooded with Chinese mushrooms."

"PRC imports have literally 'mushroomed' — from 265,000 pounds in 1979, to over 27 million pounds in 1981 — an unbelievable increase of over 10,000 percent," Heinz added.

The senior Pennsylvania senator explained this increase has prevented the existing mushroom import relief program from truly helping the industry. "Capacity utilization is declining, production and sales are flat, and profits continue to be low," he said.

"In late September, the ITC again recommended the President impose quotas on the PRC," Heinz said. "Imposing quotas on all major producers is the only comprehensive way to deal with the problems facing our mushroom industry. I have strongly urged President Reagan to act quickly to end the crisis facing our producers and protect the 35,000 jobs the mushroom industry provides in Pennsylvania."

Heinz also promised to push for passage of his legislation (S. 2120) to provide for a mushroom marketing order. That bill is currently in the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Conserve soil with lime, fertilizer

UNIVERSITY PARK — One of the most important agriculture priorities for the next decade is the conservation of our soil and water. Wind and water remove an average of five tons of topsoil from each acre of farmland per year.

The degree of soil erosion on our farmland is determined by several factors. The steeper the slope of the land, the greater the intensity of cultivation, and the poorer the fertility of the soil, all contribute to increased erosion problems.

Soil erosion, however, can be reduced by good soil management. First of all, the intensity of farming should be reduced on fragile land — steeply sloping lands, lands low in organic matter and sandy soils. These areas should be cultivated as little as possible. Steep slopes should be kept in sod. Minimum tillage techniques can be used where cultivation is necessary. Cover crops should be used, and continuous cropping with row crops should be avoided. Crop rotations should be followed so that the land is in sod about 50 to 60 percent of the time.

A good fertility program will help reduce erosion. An acid soil, and a low fertility soil, both lead to poor crop growth. Weakened root systems cannot hold the soil, and, as a result, erosion occurs. Fragile soil should be kept at a high fertility level. This begins with a sound liming program and is followed by proper use of fertilizer. Determine what is needed by soil testing. Kits are available from your county Extension office.

Penn State team places 3rd at Eastern National

LANCASTER — Not only can Penn State University boast of their Nittany Lions, but also their livestock judging team which recently came home with a third place title in overall competition from the Eastern National Livestock Exposition held recently at Timonium, Md.

The team, consisting of members Scott Davenport, Lance Emick, Dawn Jones, J.D. Shanks, Jay Temchack, and Tim Ziegler, ranked third in competition out of 17 teams following first place winner, University of Illinois, and the second place team from Colorado State.

In oral reasons competition, the Penn State team placed fifth, behind first place University of Illinois, followed by Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Ohio State, and Colorado State.

The team also journeyed home with awards in the individual classes, such as a second placing in cattle judging, third in hogs, and eighth in sheep.

Team members Tim Ziegler and Dawn Jones placed fourth and fifth, respectively, in the cattle judging, competing with 106 other contestants.

In hog judging, J.D. Shanks placed eighth, while Scott Davenport was close behind in eleventh place.

Overall individual rankings included eighth for Tim Ziegler, eleventh for J.D. Shanks, and fifteenth for Scott Davenport.

Individual oral scores awarded Tim Ziegler a placing of seventh and Dawn Jones, a spot at seventeenth place.

Earlier in the year, the team placed second overall at the Eastern States Livestock Exposition in Springfield, Mass. The team also earned a second in cattle and sheep judging and a third place in hog competition.

UEP annual meeting starts Oct. 26

DECATUR, Ga. — The 15th annual meeting of United Egg Producers, scheduled for Oct. 26-29, at Innisbrook, Tarpon Springs (Tampa), Florida, promises an interesting array of timely and thought-provoking educational sessions including a review of shell egg exports, insurance programs available to the egg industry today, committee pricing, marketing opportunities, and much more. All the sessions are designed to achieve a good balance of social/business activities for maximizing the meeting's productivity.

The annual meeting's kick-off speaker is Billy Burden. Burden is America's foremost memory training expert. He has trained thousands of men, women, boys and girls to have fantastic memories.

Special events at the annual meeting include the election of UEP officers and directors, a luncheon honoring Bob Fischer (the retiring egg nutrition advocate and champion of cholesterol research), and an annual banquet honoring the UEP Egg Producer of the Year. This is the award you've all been waiting for in that it follows industry nominations of the egg producer who has best exemplified the qualities of leadership and dedication in service to this industry. Past recipients of the egg industry's highest award include Maurice Pickler, Jerry Bookey, Henk Wentick, the late Blanton Smith John Wallace, Francis Riley, Emerson Gay, the late Truman Wilcox, and Jim Rich.

Included in the annual meeting's list of special guests will be George Dunlap, staff director of the Senate Agriculture Committee. The resolution of export subsidies and the decision into selecting commodities will be a cabinet-level decision, and Dunlap will provide his personal insight into the decision process.

For reservations, call UEP, (404/288-6700).

PFA president calls for greater cooperation

DANVILLE — Keith Eckel, president of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association called for greater cooperation among farmer cooperatives to improve net farm income. Eckel addressed the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives in Danville last Wednesday.

He said, "Farmers should vote to have farmer cooperatives work together to develop a more powerful marketing and bargaining force in the market place." He added, "PFA believes strongly in cooperatives," and he urged farmers to take a more active part in their cooperative's affairs, during both good and bad economic times.

Eckel, a Lackawanna county dairy and vegetable farmer, told the gathering, "Farmers must be concerned about the daily business of a cooperative and its future. Cooperatives must be innovators in the area of marketing. Farmers must adopt policies that permit growth of new ideas. Cooperatives must be price setters in the market place instead of undercutting their fellow cooperatives."

Eckel promised, "The Pennsylvania Farmers' Association will provide as much leadership as possible toward these objectives. PFA has no axe to grind except looking out for the well-being of farmers in Pennsylvania."

PFA testifies on deer management

CAMP HILL — A spokesman for the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association has recommended that deer management units be established within the Pennsylvania Game Commission to improve their deer herd control efforts.

Robert Burr of Prospect, Butler County made the recommendation in testimony before a field hearing of the House Game and Fisheries Committee in Butler considering H.B. 2499 which would recodify Pennsylvania's game laws.

Speaking on behalf of the 23,429 farm family member organization, Burr said deer destroy an estimated $16.5 million to $30 million worth of farm crops annually. He said, "We feel strongly that if the producers of food and fiber in Pennsylvania are expected to feed the game, as well as provide the land on which it may be hunted, we feel we should have some input as to the laws which ultimately will govern the harvesting and management of the game."

He added, "We feel this concern of the Farmers' Association is not addressed in H.B. 2499. We believe the establishment of deer management units as part of the deer herd control efforts is of prime importance. Because deer population and carrying capacities vary from one area of the state to another, we feel that a geographic unit of management would be more effective. The geographic boundary of these units may be based either according to deer population or according to the instances of deer damage to crops."

The PFA spokesman also testified in support of removing income and residency restrictions for farmers who are exempt from obtaining a hunting license. PFA also recommends that normal and accepted farming practices be excluded from penalties due to wildlife and habitat damage.

Borrowing vs. owning a horse

Lucky Lesa finds owning is the better choice

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

Happiness is having a horse of your own. Just ask Lesa Guthrie, 13, who has been a member of the Saddle Cinches 4-H Club for three years, but just got a horse two weeks ago.

For two years Lesa learned about horses and enjoyed being in contact with those who owned their own. Then about a year ago she began taking care of a "borrowed" horse. That was fun.

But two weeks ago Lesa was awarded a horse of her very own, and that's terrific!

Everyone knew there was a new colt in leader Kendy Allen's barn but what almost no one knew was that a member of the club was going to get it. Lesa recalls the meeting where they went outside for a "demonstration" on the six-month old colt. "I though someone else was going to get it. I though someone else would buy it."

The reason she thought someone else would buy it was part of the elaborate hoax engineered by Mrs. Allen and others to keep Lesa in the dark. After all, she visited Mrs. Allen daily to take care of her "borrowed" horse. When the announcement was made that the colt was donated and that Lesa was the recipient, Lesa remembers saying "You're lying to me. Then I started crying. I couldn't believe it."

A hoax was necessary because getting a free horse is not like getting most gifts. After all, a colt will grow and eat and need things like a saddle and a place to live. That all costs money, so obviously parents must be willing to go along with it.

Lesa's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Cuthrie, R4 Manheim, agreed to assume responsibility for the colt, but Lesa made it clear that she will share in the expenses in addition to caring for the colt.

It was throught he generosity of Howard and Charlotte McIntyre, 1509 Carlton Drive, Lancaster, that the colt became available. Charlotte says, "The colt was for sale but when I heard of the need in the 4-H club, all of my 4-H memories came flooding back to me. I knew then that that was exactly what I wanted to do - give it to some deserving 4-H'er. I know how important it was for our daughter Ann to get a horse - she waited 16 years. What better could we do with the colt?"

Mrs. McIntyre's memories of 4-H go back to when she lived in the coal mining area of West Virginia. She and her sister did a bread baking demonstration which eventually won in national competition in Harrisburg. She says, "I recall the thrill of awards in the 4-H program. I was in it as along as I could possibly go. Four-H was very close to my heart."

The colt was available because the mare belonged to the McIntyres' daughter who is in her freshman year at Virginia Intermont College where she is majoring in horsemanship. Since Ann could not care for the colt, they felt it had to be sold. Mrs. McIntyre says, "The colt has a good personality. It showed excellent traits."

The McIntryes were on hand when the horse was given to Lesa and Mrs. McIntyre says, "I know how Lesa felt. It filled a void in her life. We were thrilled to give it to her."

Mrs. Allen says Mr. and Mrs. McIntyre stipulated three things in giving the colt. They wanted it to go to a good home. They wanted it to go to someone who showed a real interest in horses, and to someone who didn't have a horse. Lesa easily filled all three categories.

Finally, she was selected because of a point system within the club which gives credit for meetings attended, shows participated in and interest in extra club activities. Lesa had the most number of points.

How does she feel about it? "It took me a while to get it in my head that he's mine."

Lesa is happy to be the new owner of this six-month-old colt, nicknamed Ghost, donated by Mr. and Mrs. Howard McIntyre, Lancaster. Lesa didn't own a horse, though she was a member of the Saddle Cinches horse club, and she was awarded the colt on the basis of gaining the most number of points in the club.

Will it change her life?

"No, I spent all my time here anyway."

'Here' is at Kendy Allen's where the colt will be stabled until the Guthries get their own barn built next spring.

Lesa's mother pointed out, "Last winter she got up at 6 a.m. and went down and fed the horse before school. When she gets home from school she does her homework real fast and then goes down and feeds and grooms the horse."

Last year, all of that work was done on the borrowed horse which belonged to Mrs. Allen. This year she will be doing it on the six-month-old colt which she now calls "Ghost." While he doesn't yet have an official name Lesa is considering, "Ghostly Illusion, Chipper's Chance, and Hill Street Grey.

A thoroughbred-Welsh cross, this young horse's grandsire was quite famous. Hill Prince won both the Preakness and the Belmont and came close to capturing the famous Triple Crown of horse racing. The colt's dam was a fox hunter, and Ghost has already shown that he has some potential to be a good hunter by jumping fences.

The Saddle Cinches Club paid for Ghost's initial shots, but now the veterinary and feed bills are coming to the Guthries. They are also awaiting a visit from the farrier.

There are other needs as well. Lesa says, "I have to buy my own saddle and bridle, but I have accumulated some brushes and other things. I hope to clean an office building and baby sit to make money." She has already asked for parts of the riding outfit for Christmas. In previous years Christmas and birthday money has gone for riding lessons.

Mrs. Guthrie acknowledged, "We'd have gotten a horse before if we could have afforded it. But I considered it a luxury; Lesa considers it a necessity."

She added that the horse will be a "full-time occupation" for Lesa. "Once we get the barn, I'll know where she is." Lesa joined in, "I'll call Kendy if I have problems, but it will be kind of easier to have the horse at home."

In talking about the colt, Lesa says, "He's English, a real jumper. I'll have to take lessons because you give different directions to the horse. I'll learn with the horse." UP until now she has ridden Western, but she's eager to make the change.

"My goal is that I'd like him to be a nice English pleasure horse. It will be fun to jump." She says his disposition is "real gentle."

Since Ghost cannot be ridden until he is two, Lesa says she will be showing him "at halter" and will be joining the production horse club which teaches the care of mares and foals. Jumping will not begin until he is about full grown, at age four.

In the years that she was without a horse, Lesa said there were many 4-H'ers who were willing to let her ride their horses. She said, "All you have to do is ask. It didn't bother me not to have a horse because you learn a lot even if you don't have one and you get a lot of experience and go to a lot of different activities."

The club accommodates those members without a horse by sometimes borrowing extra ones and by scheduling activities like a ride and tie race which requires two people per horse.

Her mother remarked, "I don't know where she got her interest in horses, but she's always been interested."

(Turn to Page B4)

Twice a day feeding is a must for this six-month-old colt, and Lesa feeds him before school in the morning and after homework is finished in the evening. Here she scoops out some of his regular feed.

Homestead Notes

Rebel is the horse which Lesa "borrowed" from her leader Kendy Allen. For a year, Lesa assumed the responsibility of grooming and caring for the horse and was able to ride him in several shows. She will continue to enjoy an occasional ride on Rebel, but her affections may be transferred to her own horse.

Oats classify for farmer-owned grain reserve

WASHINGTON — The 1981 and 1982 crops of oats now are eligible for immediate entry into the farmer-owned grain reserve because oat prices have fallen below a previously established level, according to a U.S. Department of Agriculture official.

Everett Rank, administrator of the USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block last January authorized entry of 1982 crop feed grains into the reserve when national average market prices were at or below established levels.

Reserve regulations provide that a commodity may be placed in the reserve when the market price is below its reserve trigger release level. The level for oats is $1.65 per bushel, Rank said.

Farmers with 1981 crop oats under Commodity Credit Corporation loan and who place this grain in the reserve are eligible for a 7-cent-per-bushel higher loan rate and an advance 20-cents-per-bushel storage payment, he said.

Producers of 1982 crop oats who place their grain in the reserve are eligible for a 18-cents-per-bushel higher loan as well as the 20-cents storage payment, Rank said.

The CCC national average loan rate for 1981-crop oats is $1.24 per bushel. When this commodity is placed in the reserve, the loan rate is $1.31 per bushel. The 1982 loan rate is $1.31 per bushel and the reserve loan rate is $1.49 per bushel. The interest rate on CCC loans is the rate applicable to all loans issued by the CCC during the month of disbursement, Rank said.

Presently, there are 2.4 million bushels of 1981-crop oats under CCC loan, Rank said. Since U.S. producers are in the early stage of their 1982 oats harvest, only 37,000 bushels have been placed under CCC loan, to date, he said.

Farmers interested in placing oats under loan or in the reserve should contact their local ASCS office, Rank said.

Lesa owns a horse now

Lesa has also taken cooking and ceramics with the Mastersonville 4-H Club. Her love of horses is the prevailing interest; however, to the surprise of her mother she said, "I'd also like to have a steer."

Care of the colt includes cleaning out the manure every day, something Lesa says she doesn't mind doing. She feeds him twice daily and carries fresh water to him from her home. She also cleans out his feet and brushes him thoroughly from head to toe, including brushing out his mane, tail and forelock.

It's a big job, with a lot of responsibility. But it is a responsibility rewarded with love and the thrill of owning a horse of her own. For Lesa Guthrie, that's true happiness.

Some thoughts on hunger

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

LANCASTER — Residing in a country that boasts of being the breadbasket of the world with its 'amber waves of grain' and its 'fruited plain,' and in a county known as the most productive nonirrigated land in the world, we may find it hard to imagine famine and severe cases of rickets and scurvy.

And daily living brings such exhausting exposure to food with discarded leftovers, free food samples in mall food shops, and limitless commercials all designed to get your money, that it's hard to fathom malnutrition.

Having been raised on a farm, I had the best when it came to mealtimes. We only had to visit the freezer in the basement, chucked full of just-butchered delights, for any choice of chicken, pork or beef we wanted. Then we walked to the chicken house and grabbed a couple eggs, scurried to the barn for fresh milk, and waited for the dairy cooperative to supply us with what we considered the best-tasting cheese, oh, just about anywhere in the world.

And I suspect it's that way for just about every farm family. It's hard to discuss famine with farm folks. Now maybe mortgages, electric rates, and legislation would hit a sore spot, but seldom famine. It just doesn't exist in our cozy worlds. It's our profession to keep it from happening. But every once in a while, somebody has to remind us of how lucky we are.

And that's what the latest United Nations' move is trying to do — make us aware of world famine, with its second annual World Food Day, celebrated today, Oct. 16.

World Food Day was established last year by the 147 member nations of the Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations because they felt the need to alert public opinion to the gravity of the present and future world food situation.

Citing UN statistics, more than 500 million people in the world today are close to starvation and millions more are malnourished. And surprisingly, even the U.S. has more than 50 million people receiving some kind of food aid whether it be food stamps, school lunches, or programs for nursing mothers and the aged.

Overwhelming statistics, yes, but is it reason enough to feel guilty and responsible? Or just understanding?

The Department of Agriculture recently answered the question, "Does America's appetite for meat bite into the meager food supplies of the world's hungry?" Some critics charge that meat consumption wastes grain that could otherwise feed hungry people.

But according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, experts claim that even if Americans forego meat, the sacrifice would provide very little more food to the world's needy.

USDA also says, "The reason that so much of the world's grain goes to livestock today is that consumers in wealthier nations can afford to pay for it. If their demand for livestock products fell off, prices would fall and feed grain production would decrease accordingly. Most of the grain fed to animals is feed grain or coarse grains, not the kind that people eat."

On paper there's no reason for malnutrition because, equally divided, no person anywhere on Earth has to go hungry. The problem is with distribution and buying power. Therefore, not only is the world hunger problem a food production problem, it is a world poverty problem, also.

Let cookies cure the hungries

Big kids and little kids love cookies. The Cookie Monster on television's Sesame Street adores them and the elves from the Keebler Company spend hour upon hour manufacturing them in their tree.

And is it any wonder that television recognizes the great American snack food, cookies? Ah, yes, but try as they might, they just aren't able to advertise the delicious taste that only is achieved through homemade cookies. Nothing can beat the freshness and taste of a cookie fresh from your own oven.

We at Lancaster Farming have our doubts as to whether one ever gets tired of the ol' standbys — chocolate chip, sugar and peanut butter cookies — but in case you do, here is a delightful array of tastes guaranteed to please even the pickiest of eaters.

UNFORGETTABLE COOKIES
2 egg whites
3/4 c. sugar
1/2 c. chopped nuts
6 oz. chocolate chips
1/2 t. vanilla
pinch of salt

Beat egg whites until stiff. Gradually add sugar, beating constantly. Add salt and vanilla, then fold in chocolate chips and nuts. Drop by teaspoonsful on greased baking sheet. Put in oven at 350 degrees and turn off heat. Do not remove until oven is cool.

Mrs. Aaron Martin, New Holland

BREAD CRUMB COOKIES

QUESTION - Does anyone have a delicious sweet and sour pork recipe? I would love to find one which closely resembles the Chinese dish found in so many restaurants.

Mrs. Ralph Miller

ANSWER — Yes, Mrs. Millers, we ran a delicious recipe in last week's issue (Oct. 9) called sweet and sour pork. Perhaps you would like to try that one. Does anyone else have a recipe for this taste treat?

ANSWER — In response to a request for venison recipes, we received three answers. Find them at the end of the recipe section. Thanks for the recipes go to Vivian Heffner of Windsor, Julia Shaull, and Linda Whetzel of Brodbecks.

Cure the hungries

SWEET DEER BOLOGNA

10 lbs. deer meat
1 lb. brown sugar
1/4 t. red pepper
1 t. black pepper
2 1/2 t. salt and pepper, in warm water melted
6 oz. salt
1/2 t. mace
2 c. Karo light corn syrup

Mix all ingredients and pour over deer meat. Mix and stuff in bags. Hang for 2 days before smoking. Smoke 3 times every 7 days. Let hang for about 2 months before cutting. Hang in cool place.

Mrs. Vivian Heffner, Windsor

DEER BOLOGNA

50 lbs. venison, ground fine
3 lb. brown sugar
pepper to taste
1 1/2 lb. salt
1 1/2 gal. molasses
2 1/2 oz. saltpeter

Mix all ingredients. Taste to see if a sweeter taste is desired. Stuff in bags. I make my bags about 4 inches wide. My bags hold approximately 6 1/2 lb. each and we usually get about 8 bags. After smoking 3 days, we let it hang about 2 months. Keep your eye on it as the weather plays a big part here.

Julia Shaull

DEER BOLOGNA

10 lbs. ground deer meat
2 1/2 lb. pork sausage
1/2 c. brown sugar
1/4 c. salt
1 c. Morton's Tender Quick
1/4 c. liquid smoke
2 t. saltpeter
1 t. mace
1 t. ground cloves
4 t. black pepper

Mix together and let stand 3 days in refrigerator. After 3 days, stuff tightly into cloth bags and make from string cloth. Sew sides and one end; tie other end after stuffing. Cook in boiling water for 1 hour after water comes to a boil. Ready to eat. Freezes well.

Blooms for December

If you've been nursing along a poinsettia from last Christmas, Penn State Extension horticulturists remind you that starting October, the plant must have 14 hours of continuous darkness.

Night temperature should be between 60 to 70 degrees F. During the daytime, the plant must have direct light from six to eight hours. For the 14 hours of darkness, you can place the plant in a dark closet in the evening, or cover it with a cardboard box.

Any artificial light at night will delay or inhibit the natural flower bud setting process. That will mean no red, pink, or white poinsettia for Christmas — unless you buy new ones.

October's also the time to start doing something about spring flowering bulbs, if you want them to bloom indoors around Valentine's Day. The easiest bulbs for force are crocus, galanthus, hyacinth, narcissus, scilla and tulip.

Forcing bulbs includes two phases. In the first phase, the bulbs develop buds and roots. In the second phase, they bloom.

Start the first phase in October or early November. Plant the bulbs in pots and keep them at a temperature of 40 degrees F. for 8 to 12 weeks. You can keep the pots outdoors or indoors. If indoors, the room must be dark and kept at 40 degrees. Water the bulbs every day.

The second phase begins about mid-January after the shoots are well out of the necks of the bulbs. Bring the bulbs into a cool, bright room that you can keep at 55 degrees. They will bloom in about one month. Perhaps an easier way to start the bulbs in developing buds and roots is to refrigerate bulbs such as crocus, hyacinth, narcissus and tulip at 40 degrees for two months instead of planting them in pots.

After two months, plant the bulbs in bowls and put into the cool, bright room at 55 degrees. They'll bloom in about a month. You should discard bulbs that you forced to bloom.

Kid's Korner

Farewell, Mr. Blacksmith

A customer came into the shop with a relative I had never met. He had left home in his youth to work in a distant city. After this man came in, the usually quiet mare would not stand still. The visitor recognized her as his old buggy mare. They had a happy reunion after which she was calm. It would have broken her heart not to have been remembered. They had not seen each other since she was 5 or 6 years old. She was then about 12.

The horse's action in the presence of his current or former owner gives a most reliable and unbiased appraisal of the owner's character. The character of the horse is more evident than the character of the human being.

While horses seem to remember people indefinitely, they seem to be less able to remember other horses. After a separation of up to six months a horse may not recognize his former teammate or a mare recognize her own colt. The horse's reunion with the family and family dog would, chances are, just simply resume as if he had never been away. If he had liked the family dog he would be delighted to see him again. If he had disliked the dog he would resume his efforts to kick him into orbit. He could easily be fond of one dog and dislike another.

A customer bought a team of practically worthless bay geldings for nearly nothing. They were handsome five-year-olds in good shape, but they pulled a wagon like a plow (slowly), and balked at much of a load. In a few months they were a premium team and he sold them back to their former owner at a premium price. This first owner soon learned he had bought back exactly what he had previously sold. Some people cannot get anything but trouble from a horse.

Too much help can enslave some people, thus becoming counter productive. This is never a problem with horses. Horses are eager to please and always delighted to respond to a kindness. They share the owner's grief or laughter. The person who has difficulty working with a horse seems to expect the horse to be as smart as he is. In his case, he may be right.

We had a large dapple gray gelding I'd like to tell you about. He was black when he was colt and completely gray at about 12 years of age. One day when we had him hitched to a sled loaded with a roll of fence, two men stopped to admire him. They asked about his cooperation and I offered to demonstrate. In advance I told them that by voice I would direct him to and around a well about 100 yards away. While he was circling the well he would stop, take two steps, stop, start again and return. Enroute back, even though he was fast gaited, he would slow to a creep when most horses would normally speed up. He proved as good as I claimed. He was glad all over when we congratulated each other. He knew we were showing off and got as big a bang out of his performance as I did. His name was Prince.

Prince was teamed with his full sister. She was a blood bay and one year older. Her name was Beauty. They delighted in amazing me with their understanding and capabilities. To be more effective in starting a heavy load I noticed that Beauty would anchor and Prince would start it. It is fun when you realize your team is teaching you. Their names, which became so appropriate, were suggested by Mama shortly after their births. They never know other than a mutual love and respect for our family. It is always pleasing to honor a mutual bond of faith.

The advent of the truck gradually decreased the demand for shoeing horses and setting wagon wheel tires. In the late 1920's and early 1930's the tractor became prominent. More ground was being utilized. More plowshares were being pointed by the smiths. They were probably never busier than in 1940 just before World War II. During this war, the farm implement manufacturers introduced a recyclable plowshare. This was the final curtain call for the blacksmith shops in the farming communities.

The recyclable plowshare was designed because of the many times this boy's back became tired from pointing them. From day one of this hard work I knew there had to be a better way. I made the first three, and the first observers considered them to be ridiculous. Had it not been for the shortage of labor during World War II it may never have been accepted. A better way, when accepted, is always progress.

The last of the smiths I knew passed away in 1972. Each one was a friend of mine. If we could salvage their dignity and pride, our crime and welfare problems would be reduced materially.

While the career of most smiths began after they were 30, mine terminated at 22. For me, every career and profession since has been interesting, but in my heart I never left the blacksmith shop. I hope the current generation enjoys its youth as much as I did and can have fun sharing it as I have with you. It was a delight for me to paticipate in this era.

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

In the midst of October, nature sweeps across the countryside with sensual grace. On the farm, fall is a bountiful buffet of food for the senses, a feast of indulgence in sight and smells and sounds.

Gone are those sticky, muggy, almost unbearable nights and baking-hot afternoons of midsummer which exhaust both body and mind. We gardeners have long since given up worries about weeding, and even the hordes of several generations of flies that cluster in September are falling victim to the seasonal cycle.

Now the air stirs crips and fresh, a heady tang to each breath that clears and renews emotional and physical energies. Dawn awakens with a pale orange sliver on the horizon, steadily pushing upward the heavy, gray curtain of night.

Soon, the shining rays of sunlight stretch searching fingers past the kitchen curtains to brighten the shadows, and pink tufts color the blue and white patchwork of early-morning sky.

Below the pond, in the lowlands of the heifer pasture, a normally staid and proper green swamp maple has been transformed into a raving beauty, in dress so crimson-bright it almost pains the eyes to linger there long.

Oaks, hickory and honey locust choose festive shades more befitting their regal standing in the rolling woodlands — adding color, but in conservative yellows and golds, or muted burgundy shades.

While much of the corn harvest still remains to be gathered, the bulk of small grain plantings are tucked in the ground. There the tiny seeds await gentle seasonal rains to stir their dormancy into pushing tiny white roots and shoots of deep green through the fall brownness.

Another harvest perfumes the kitchen, the scent of Red Delicious apples stirs whenever someone passes by the glass dish rounded with shiny red fruit. Stepping outside into the chilly coolness of early evening for barn chores, we're enveloped in another fragrance, the pungent, homey aroma of woodsmoke, drifting across the pasture from a neighbor's woodstove.

And from somewhere in the distance, toward the pale emerging moon, float back the haunting, melodious echoes of a small flock of wild geese, their graceful flight filled with purpose, a compelling inner-drive toward some unknown destination.

Why is it that the cries of the wild geese sound so sorrowful in October, yet fill us with joy when the same call drifts through the spring air? Perhaps it's because we sense some sort of ending, some bidding farewell to another season of our mortal lives.

And yet, isn't it instead but another beginning of a different time, a new period of challenges and briskness of winter, a time of less rushing, of more inner reflection.

In a world torn with global squabbling, floundering in an economic quagmire and saddened with senseless acts of madman-terrorism, surely October is a precious gift. She offers beauty, a quickening of joy with just one glace, one walk outside.

October, by gosh, comes just when the world needs it.

3 FFA'ers participate in Virginia judging

ELVERSON — Three Pennsylvania members represented the state FFA in livestock judging at the Virginia State Fair in Richmond, Va.

The team, composed of Nancy McCauley, from Octarara; Wendy Flinchbaugh, from Red Lion; and Rod Stoltzfus, from Twin Valley, earned fourth place among FFA teams.

In individual competition, Nancy and Wendy tied for ninth place, with Wendy receiving tenth on reasoning scores. In species competition, Nancy was third in beef judging, with the team placing fourth. In Swine judging, Wendy tied for fifth place, with the team placing third.

All three Pennsylvania contestants had placed in the top ten in the state livestock judging contest. Ronald Frederick, FFA Advisor at Twin Valley, accompanied the group.

16 compete

Sixteen members of the Twin Valley FFA chapter competed in the livestock judging contest at the Reading Fair. Judges placed classes of market swine, both market steers and beef heifers, and breeding sheep. Each student's placings were then compared to that of an official judge.

In the senior division, Bert Zerr, 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Zerr, of Geigertown, placed third, Tom Hornberger, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Lafferty, R1 Birdsboro, placed ninth; while Cooper Stumb, 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Stumb, R1 Mohnton, placed tenth. The Twin Valley team placed second.

In the junior division, Craig Miller, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Miller, R3, Elverson, placed sixth. The Twin Valley junior team finished in third place.

Other Twin Valley contestants were Pam Trostle, Chris Cylcewski, Don Rogers, Glenn Stoltzfus, Steve Plank, Dave Sowa, Joe Nonnemaker, Chad Myer, Chuck Plank, Tim McEwen, Rod Stoltzfus, and Mark Zerr.

11 judge cows

Eleven members of the Twin Valley FFA Chapter participated in the recent Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Judging forum held in Harrisburg in conjunction with the Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show. Judging contestants from FFA chapters from across Pennsylvania placed classes of Holstein junior yearlings and 2 year old cows, Jersey junior yearlings and 3 year old cows, Guernsey senior calves and 3 year old cows, and Ayrshire 2 year old cows. Additionally each student took a quiz on dairy management.

Twin Valley contestants were Lisa Yoder, "Bert" Zerr, Clark Schnable, Dave Sowa, Greg Raser, Mark Zerr, Steve Plank, Craig Miller, Dounld Rodgers, Shawn Ink and Jill Stacy.

While none of the students placed in the top ten in individual competition, the team placed eleventh.

5 receive awards

Five members of the Twin Valley FFA received awards for their projects exhibited at the Reading Fair. Chapter exhibits also received awards.

The chapter window exhibit, "Backyard Wilderness," placed third in competition against other exhibits from Berks County FFA chapters. In field corn classes, exhibits from the chapter test plot earned the first-place award for Trogen, and second place awards for Eastland, Funks, and Doeblers. Corn stalks placed second in the grain division and fourth in the silage class.

Kevin Griest showed the second place silage corn from his project field corn.

Mark Zerr exhibited second-place peppers, third-place parsley, and fourth-place tomatoes from his vegetable garden project. Marks' sister "Bert" showed third place brown eggs from her laying hen project.

Chris Coblentz earned first-place in the Ayrshire junior calf class and Reserve Junior champion honors. Chris also placed 7th in the fitting contest.

In Brown Swiss competition, Mike Kline placed second with his senior two-year-old heifer and both Reserve junior and senior champion honors.

Maryland 4-H'ers rank 3rd at dairy expo

MADISON, WIS. — Maryland's 4-H dairy cattle judging team finished third in the over-all standings among 37 state teams during this year's national contest, held September 29 at Madison, Wis., in conjunction with the World Dairy Expo.

The Maryland team also was third in Guernsey breed judging, sixth in Ayrshire judging, ninth in Brown Swiss, and fourth in total reasons at the 61st annual youth contest.

Among 147 individual participants, Maryland team member Janet Stiles, 16, was the runnerup in over-all standings. She finished third in both Ayrshire and Jersey breed judging, and fifth in over-all reasons. Janet's parents live in the Silvercrest area near Damascus, Montgomery County.

Lisa Bond, 18, of Arters Mill Carroll County, placed fourth in Guernsey breed judging, while Kevin Leaverton, 17, of Centerville, Queen Annes County, was seventh in Guernseys.

The other team member was Linda Catron, 16, of Dickerson, Montgomery County.

J. Lee Majeskie, an Extension herd management specialist and associate professor of dairy science at the University of Maryland in College Park, coached this year's team.

Since 1971, in seven out of 12 years, Maryland teams have been among the top five in national 4-H dairy cattle judging competition. They were national champions in 1972, 1976 and 1978. No Maryland 4-H team has finished lower than eleventh during the last dozen years.

Convert to a skirt

Today, you can do almost anything with your sewing machine, including an entire update of your wardrobe. In a few minutes, for example, you can convert outdated culottes into a fashionable slim skirt.

Few people use their sewing machine to its full potential, and it's no wonder. The world has changed since the days most people learned about sewing machines.

With the advent of new fabrics, synthetic fibers and advanced sewing machine technology, sewing has become a sophisticated art form, according to Janice Saunders, author of "Speed Sewing" (Van Nostrand Reinhold Publishers). The information most people learned in school is now obsolete.

Today, basting, hemming and other techniques that once required hand stitching can be done smoothly and efficiently with a sewing machine. Crafts, such as smocking, cutwork, applique, embroidery and webwork are not only possible, but also easy to do by machine.

In her book, Saunders helps people to get their money's worth from their sewing machines. Her book explains, simplifies and updates basic techniques, while providing valuable sewing short-cuts and craft ideas.

Saunders also includes recycling suggestions for sweaters, skirts and dresses. She even demonstrates how to convert two ripped pairs of pantyhose into one usable pair.

Turning culottes into a slim skirt is one example of creative recycling from Saunders' book. Here is an adaptation of her directions:

MATERIALS: Culottes or gaucho pants with full legs; sewing machine; matching thread; straight pins; tailor's chalk or felt-tip marking pen; iron.

PREPARATION: Rip crotch seam to about 9 inches below the waistline. If zipper is in center-front or center-back, rip crotch seam to ½ inch below bottom of zipper. 2. Reinforce seam to keep it from coming unstitched. 3. Take out hem.

CREATING NEW SEAMS: 1. Try garment on, right side out. 2. To establish center-front seamline, overlap front pieces at center front and pin together. 3. Establish center-back seamline by pinning together back pieces.

BASTING: 1. Take off skirt. Mark new seamlines with fabric marking pen or tailor's chalk. 2. Re-pin with right sides together. 3. Baste. 4. Trim away excess fabric, but leave generous seam allowances.

STITCHING: 1. Gently press seams open. 2. Try on skirt again; make adjustments if necessary. 3. Machine-stitch seams. 4. Trim seams to 5/8 inch and overcast. 5. Hem skirt. 6. Press all seams open.

Sire Power open house attracts record crowd

TUNKHANNOCK — More than 2,200 cooperative member dairyproducers, friends and guests gathered for the annual NEBA-Sire Power Open House held recently at the Tunkhannock headquarters.

Farm families from all over Northeaster Pennsylvania, Maryland, and New Jersey came to view the more than 200 sires and tour the new office facilities.

The large crowd was able to view first-hand the new offices which employees moved into one week prior to Open House. The 19 offices cover 13,000 square feet.

A dedication of the new office building with a red ribbon cutting marked the official opening. Present were members of the Building Committee and NEBA Board members which included: Harold Lesher, Building Committee Chairman; Bill Terhune; Cliff Sands; Gerald Parker; Gary Rickard, President of NEBA/Sire Power Boards; Margin Stout, NEBA Sales and Service Director; Marlin Hoff, President of MD ABC and Sire Power Director; and DuWayne Kutz, General Manager. Also present were representatives from Milnes Construction and other sub-contractors for the building.

"The NEBA-Sire Power organization was able to construct this new facility and pay for it with cash due to its strong financial position," Kutz announced.

Following the dedication, a deep pit ox roast was served for lunch by the Tunkhannock Triton Hose members.

Gary Rickard, President of NEBA and Sire Power welcomed the crowd under and reviewed the past year's activities. He highlighted his comments by discussing the possible business merger or reorganization of Sire Power and the three federated cooperatives.

President Rickard updated the cooperative members with information of the plans on the reorganization of Sire Power. He informed the crowd that the Maryland, NEBA, and Sire Power Board Members have approved plans for reorganization. The West Virginia Board will receive the drafted proposal for reorganization for approval at a meeting scheduled for early November. President Rickard and the board members indicated the reorganization is necessary due to the expansion and growth in sales over the past 12 years.

"We feel it will increase management efficiency, assure continued reasonable and competitive prices for our sires, and our services and programs to our customers," voted Rickard.

General Manager Kutz explained the decision making process which took place prior to building the new office complex.

"The increase in our business over the past 10 years form $2 million to $8 million dollars has resulted in the need for management and employee expansion. The additional sales caused a need for the new offices to accomodate this growth.

"The alternative to remodel the old office was thoroughly discussed with board members and voting delegates," said Kutz. "It was found to be more advantageous and desirable to build a new office rather than renovation."

Another highlight of the program was a presentation of the Linear Type Appraisal Explanation by Lloyd Ebersole, Director of Sire Programs.

"This is a revolution in breeding value evaluation. The information we are presenting in the directories is the best genetic information we can give the dairyman. It explains the bull's breeding pattern with the most accurate and reliable information."

Steve Neely, Sire Analyst, reviewed the line-up of sires and discussed the new bulls added to the program. "We were proud to put seven graduates from the Young Sire Program into the Holstein line-ups also have strengthened with additions of new graduates and sires we distribute semen on from other A.I. cooperatives."

Door prizes were given out to climax the day's activities. A special drawing for a calf was won by Dave Mattocks, Tunkhannock, the calf was a daughter from Reuben Everitt's farm, Brackney, Chairman currently is the top TPI Holstein sire.

Adams County leaders receive VIP treatment

By M. Eileen Graham

YORK SPRINGS — Adams County 4-H leaders were given VIP treatment last week at their 1982 4-H Leaders Banquet, held at the Fire Hall, here.

Volunteer leaders were described as "very important people" by Adams County 4-H Agent Jared K. Tyson, who said that through them, 4-H helps local youth to develp paths to the future.

Tyson presented the special Partners in 4-H Award to Knouse Foods Cooperative, represented by Ward Cooper, Knouse Foods director of procurement, and his wife Laura.

For 14 years, Knouse has supported the Adams County 4-H Interstate Exchange Program by donating fruit gift packs for the host families of teenagers who are visiting 4-H'ers in other states.

The exchange program provides an opportunity for teensagers to develop positive, personal attitudes about themselves and others, and to develop a mature sense of the world, Tyson said.

Every other year, the Adams County organization hosts 35-40 teens from a county in another state; in the following year, they return the visit.

This year, 35 Adams County 4-H'ers traveled by bus to Tennessee, he said. The trip was almost entirely subsidized by the county senate and board of directors.

Cooper accepted the Partners in 4-H Award, stating, "The nicest thing about the whole program is the letters I receive from the young people who come back."

Honors were conferred upon 22 teen leaders by Extension Program Assistant Darlene M. Resh, who described them as "the left hand, right hand or both hands" of their adult leaders.

Also recognized were the adult leaders, with 41 first-year, 22 fifth-year, 10 tenth-year and 2 twentieth-year leaders receiving bronze, silver, gold, and gold with diamond pins, respectively. All other leaders were also honored, including Thomas Murren, a 34-year volunteer, and Teresa Murren, a leader with 37 years service.

Luther Smith, president of the Adams County 4-H Board of Directors, and Kenneth Reinhart, vice president, noted the number of 4-H'ers who participated in county events during the 1981-82 year.

Reinhart explained that all of the programs and events are subsidized by local fund-raising activities such as the annual cookie sale, now in progress, and Pa. Department of Agriculture development funds. "This amount does not come from any county tax dollars," he stated of the organization's 1981-82 $12,130 budget.

During a brief business meeting, Mark Wilson, Robert McMaster, Mary Jane Hilbert and Linda Guise were elected to the 15-member board of directors, replacing four outgoing members.

Luther Smith, presents a plaque and diamond chip pin to 4-H leader Freida Johnson, Gettysburg, for 20 years service to 4-H.

Tyson introduceed Janette Kromhof, a resident of Holland, now visiting Adams County as part of the International 4-H Youth Exchange program.

Highlighting the evening was a unique slide-tape show featuring the close-up photography of Brain Wilson.

This year's banquet had a record attendance of 150 4-H members and leaders.

Luther Smith, president of 4-H Clubs in Adams County, presents a plaque and gold pin for 10 years service to 4-H leaders Kay King, York Springs; Mary Flickinger, Gettysburg; Carolyn Legg, Gettysburg; Nadine Stock, New Oxford; Edward Shetter, Gettysburg; Karol Sherman, Abbottstown; and Daniel Hoffman, Gettysburg.

Weekly roundup of world production, trade

WASHINGTON, DC — The Foreign Agriculture Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture reported the following recent developments in world agriculture and trade last Wednesday:

Dairy, Livestock and Poultry

As a result of recent large increases in the domestic price of beef in Argentina, exporters who previously signed contracts for shipments overseas are being forced to suspend some of those deals. In early September, the domestic price of beef rose 34 percent, making it uneconomical for exporters to fulfill their commitments. While beef exporters attempt to get the government of Argentina to take some action to correct the export margins, some shipments lay idle. Among those beef contracts involved to date are 5,700 tons to the Soviet Union and Israel.

Sweden announced on Sept. 15 that it would discontinue the ban on imports of meats from Denmark, which was issued on March 18, 1982. The ban was imposed after outbreak of foot and mouth disease in Denmark. Sweden normally imports about 2,000 tons of beef and pork from Denmark, but since the import ban, has turned to meat from Canada and Ireland.

In Poland, production incentives and a larger domestic grain crop could produce a 9 percent recovery in poultry meat production during 1983. The Ministry of Agriculture and Food, which controls the poultry industry and programs, is trying to increase poultry production on private farms by supplying them with chicks and feed concentrates.

Poland's broiler industry, which relied heavily on imported feeds, has been severely affected by credit restrictions. Many large operations have been forced to stop production completely. In the first 5 months of 1982, production of slaughter poultry in the State sector was down 56 percent compared with the same period in 1981. May production was down more than 80 percent from a year ago. Poultry meat output this year is projected to drop 67 percent from the 1981 record of 461,000 tons.

Japan's pork production in June was below year-ago levels for the first time this year, suggesting producers are starting to react to favorable hog/feed price ratios by holding back gilts for breeding. Total production in the first half of 1982 was 3 percent above year-ago levels, but production in May was only 1 percent above last year's level. Should this trend continue, total pork production this year could fall slightly below current projections.

N.J. farmer seeks action to boost soybean prices

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Salem soybean farmer Preston Ware joined soybean leaders from 25 states who gathered in Washington, D.C. recently to launch an intensive effort to gain congressional action to bolster soybean prices.

"We need action," says Ware, who currently serves as Mid-Atlantic Soybean Association Board of Directors member. "Unless we sell what we produce and sell at a profit, 'bin busting' crops will continue to depress farm prices while government supports add to federal budget deficits. We don't want a tax supported surplus hanging over the market to lower prices. We want to sell soybeans at profitable prices and we're asking Congress for immediate action."

Ware was one of more than 50 soybean leaders who attended the emergency meeting which included briefings from Agriculture Secretary John Block; Congressman William Emerson (R-Mo.); Senator Richard Lugar (R-In.); and an official from the White House. Following the briefings, the farmers sought action during meetings with their local congressmen and senators. A small group of the soybean farmers met with Vice President George Bush.

Ware said soybean farmers seek approval of a 4-point emergency sales program. The program includes:

Approving anti-embargo contract sanctity legislation which would guarantee fulfillment of private export shipments of all U.S. exports.

Increasing CCC export financing for soybeans and soybean products.

Expanding PL480 Food for Peace soybean oil shipments to countries such as India and Pakistan.

Aggressively opposing unfair subsidy programs used by Brazil, Argentina and other nations. While such subsidies continue, ASA seeks U.S. efforts to provide reduced interest loans or other competitive export tools which allow the U.S. to compete on equal terms.

"U.S. farmers are sinking in the quicksand of international distrust," said ASA President B.B. Spratling, Jr. "While ASA's proposals for export expansion are important, our No. 1 priority is gaining congressional approval of anti-embargo contract sanctity legislation. Four times in the past 10 years, the U.S. government has cancelled private export contracts. Is it any wonder that our international customers no longer believe the U.S. is a reliable supplier of life-sustaining feed and food products?

"It's time to end embargoes, get the State Department out of agriculture, stop using food as a political weapon and restore international trust in U.S. contracts."

At York Achievement Day

Eisenhart, Livingston wear 4-H crowns

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

YORK — Beverly Eisenhart and Robert Livingston were chosen York County 1983 4-H queen and king at the highlight of the annual Achievement Day, held Sunday at the county's 4-H center.

The pair's first public appearance to promote the 4-H program came Monday evening, when they took part in the Dover Halloween parade. A second parade, the large York city event scheduled for October 31, is already penciled into their schedules, along with upcoming visits to area 4-H programs and meetings.

Other finalists interviewed by a three-judge panel were Chris Shive, Seven Valleys; Linda Waltersdorf, York; David Krone, Glen Rock; and Michael Welsh, East Berlin.

A member of the Thomasville county sheep club, 17-year-old Bev has been in 4-H for eight years. In addition to her sheep projects, she carries clothing, leathercraft, ceramics and teen leader projects. Bev is president of County Council, and has headed both the Thomasville and lamb clubs. Her judging activities included the clothing team, which in 1980 won state competition, and consumerama team.

A senior at Dover High School, Bev is president of the careers club. She volunteers as a candy striper at York Hospital, and is a member of Dover United Church of Christ. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Keith Eisenhart, R2 Dover, partners in the Eisenhart Brothers dairying operation near Thomasville.

Rob Livingston is the son of beef and crops farmers Mr. and Mrs. George Livingston, 5441 Davidsburg Road, Dover. His 4-H projects have centered around beef cattle, meats and livestock judging. The 18-year-old is president of the county's beef club, officer in county council and has judged with both the meats and livestock teams. He was the 1981 winner of $1,000 as top youth judge at the Eastern National Livestock Exhibition at Timonium.

A graduate of Dover High School, Rob is a member of their FFA chapter, and has taken part in FFA livestock judging competition at the Kansas City convention. He's a freshmen at Penn State campus in York, with a major in animal production studies.

Several county 4-H members also won outstanding individual recognition.

Dawn Raubenstine, Hanover club, earned the 1982 Outstanding Girl overall award, and Mike Welsh, Thomasville club, was named Outstanding Boy overall.

Senior outstanding girl was Bev Eisenhart and boy was Loganville club's Troy Goodling. Outstanding junior girl trophy went to Lesley King, Airville club. Rookie honors went to Steve Wherley and Robin Shive.

U. of Del. poultry scientist wins $100,000 research grant

NEWARK, Del. — John K. Rosenberger, poultry virologist at the University of Delaware, has won a $100,000 competitive grant to study a group of viruses known to inhibit normal growth in chickens. Last year he received a similar grant for $60,900 to support the initial phases of this work. The money was awarded under the U.S. Department of Agriculture's animal health research program.

Poultry producers on the Delmarva peninsula and in other parts of the country lose an estimated $15 million a year because of crippling in young growing broiler chickens. They lose an additional undetermined amount when less obviously afflicted birds don't grow well. Local producers have been so concerned about such losses that in 1978 the Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc., provided a $5,000 seed grant to help initiate Rosenberger's reovirus research.

He and some other scientists believe that poultry skeletal disorders and other abnormalities ofter may result indirectly from avian reoviruses which interfere with a chicken's ability to absorb nutrients from the food it eats.

Rosenberger has been studying this group of viruses at the Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station for the past five years as part of a federal Hatch project. During that time he and his assistants have isolated many reoviruses.

"Several of these isolates are capable of inducing osteoporosis (brittle bone disease), arthritis, stunting, abnormal feathering and pale skin and muscles in chickens," he says. The researchers have found reoviruses in the intestinal tract, liver and pancreas of infected birds, thus supporting Rosenberger's theory that the disease syndrome is caused by malabsorption and possible poor digestion or poor utilization of nutrients.

John K. Rosenberger—

Over the next three years, with support from his latest grant, Rosenberger will seek to characterize individual avian reoviruses in terms of their effects on poultry, and then develop vaccines effective against the most harmful ones.

Collaborating with him on the project will be Thomas J. Schnitzer, a University of Michigan virologist. Schnitzer will isolate reovirus RNA segments and recombine them genetically in hybrid forms containing properties desirable in vaccines.

During the final year of the project, Rosenberger will evaluate modified forms of vaccine for field use. When the research is completed, he hopes to provide the broiler industry with a means to reduce costly losses associated with the reovirus-prompted malabsorption syndrome.

Delaware girl wins Bob Evans horse

Cathy Wapniarek exercises Sam's Nifty Pep, the Quarter horse weanling she was presented by Bob Evans, recently. Although Cathy has taken riding lessons and participated in the 4-H horse project, she had never owned a horse.

NEWARK, DEL. [illegible] Newark, Delaware girl is one of nine 4-H members from across the nation awarded Quarter horse weanlings by Ohio sausage-maker Bob Evans.

Cathy Wapniarek was taken by surprise when she and her family received an invitation to spend a western-style roundup weekend at the Bob Evans farm in Ohio. They brought along a horse trailer, and came home with a frisky filly, Sam's Nifty Pep.

Although Cathy has taken riding lessons and participated in the 4-H horse project, she has never owned a horse. Fortunately her father, John Wapniarek, had just built a barn to house his other daughter's 4-H sheep project.

Animal lovers all, the Wapniareks also raise dogs, cats, rabbits, bees, and pigeons. The rabbits and bees are also Cathy's 4-H projects. The pigeons belong to her younger brother, who is not yet old enough for 4-H.

The Wapniareks don't actually live on a farm, although their home stands on a large wooded lot adjoining Cathy's grandmother's farmland. John Wapniarek's current building project is a corral for Nifty. Once it's finished, Cathy will teach her how to lunge (walk aroung in a large circle led by a rope).

After Nifty's fully trained, Cathy hopes to show her at the Delaware State Fair.

Cathy was awarded the horse on the basis of her 4-H and community activities. She is secretary of the Bear 4-H Club and a member of 4-H junior council. She has also participated in athletics and musical activities at school.

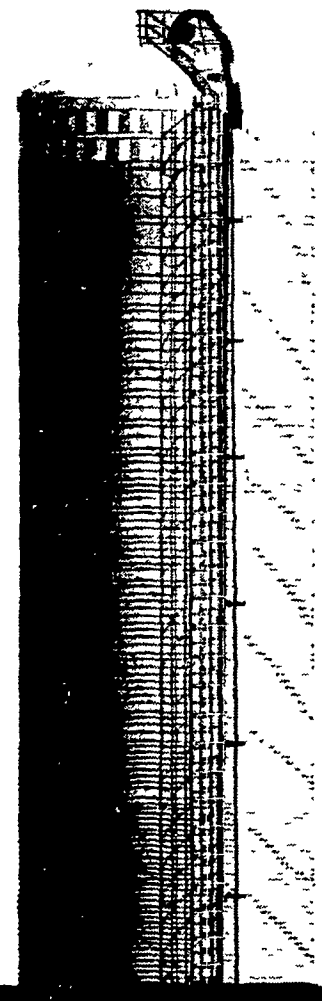
YOU'LL FIND IT IN LANCASTER FARMING'S CLASSIFIEDS

THIS IS THE BEST WAY TO PUT UP YOUR FORAGE CROP—HERE'S WHY:



1 Better light reflectivity. The light gray Madison Vibra-Cor® staves reflect light 2½ times better than dark blue—and better than any other stave. Result: Less temperature fluctuation in the structure.

2 Better insulation value. Concrete is a much better insulation material than steel! And the unique Vibra-Cor® design makes a Madison stave better than any other concrete stave. Result: Your Madison provides lowest possible temperature variations.

3 Less expansion and contraction. The real key to top quality haylage. Less heat transfer. Less "breathing." A better atmosphere for a perfect feed—no matter how much the weather fluctuates.

4 The best unloader. Laidig. Madison helped develop it and knows it inside and out. So your new Nutri-Matic® was designed to make the most of this remarkable unloader that's been called "the best there is"!

5 Greater capacity. Because a Madison Nutri-Matic® doesn't require space-robbing breather bags, you get a bonus of extra capacity! Up to four feet of valuable extra room.

6 Better service. Ask a Madison owner. For 65 years, Madison service people have been building a reputation that can't be beat.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

My husband and I enjoy fishing, but it is almost impossible to find the time. He milks fifty cows and manages to fill the three silos by himself. Now he has the manure pit to empty and rye to plant.

We haven't had much luck here on the Conestoga River that flows by our meadow. Maybe we don't go at the right time or we don't use the correct bait. What we manage to do though, is lose our lines as they catch on rocks and sunken trees.

When I fished with my son Jeffrey, and got my line snagged, he surprised me and jumped in the river with his clothes on and managed to submerge and unhook the line. I thanked him but had to laugh as he was a funny sight with the water dripping from his mustache.

Late in the summer before he took his job at the University of Maine, Jeffrey, my husband and I started early one morning to go fishing in the Juniata River. We found a ramp to unload our aluminum boat and motored to a bank on the opposite side.

The fish were not biting but it was a lovely day and we were entertained by counting the long 135 car freight trains which rumbled by just above our heads. Jeffrey tried many different lures but I stuck to worms. He had managed to get quite a few night crawlers from my garden the night before by using a flashlight and by being quick at snatching them.

In the afternoon, we moved to a new location on the lake at Little Buffalo State Park. After a hearty lunch in their picnic grove, we launched the boat again and caught a few small fish. We saw two canoes upset and worried a bit until the four occupants managed to swim to shore.

It was a day to remember.

Ladies Have You Heard?

Shampoo Your Sweater

Do you look longingly at the sweater you strunk last month? Most of us can't afford to replace expensive woolens we've ruined by a costly mistake. With a little care and attention, you can usually restore your shrunken woolens to their original shape. Shampoo's the secret!

First, make a solution of two tablespoons of synthetic detergent shampoo and one gallon of lukewarm water. (Shampoos made of soap are well labeled, don't use these.) Then, put the clean woolen article in the solution and gently squeeze the solution through the wool. Lift the article out of the solution and squeeze and excess out. DO NOT RINSE!

Next, lay the article flat on plastic and gently stretch it back to its original shape. Use a similar article of the original size to guide you. Let the article dry flat, turning it to be sure it dries completely. Once it's dry, you can steam iron your article using a pressing cloth, to restore the original matte finish. You can also use a suede brush or a clothes brush to separate matted fringes.

How does the magic work? The shampoo remaining in the article reacts with wool fibers to relax them so they can return to their original shape. The key work is "original" — don't use this method to make something turn into a larger size, it won't. If one shampoo doesn't seem to do the trick try another.

Once your favorite sweater has been returned to its original glory, be especially careful when you wash it again. Use a mild hand dishwashing detergent or cold water soap specifically designed for washing woolens and fine fabrics. Squeeze gently and rinse twice to be sure you remove all suds and soil. Then, as before, squeeze out the excess water, lay the sweater flat on plastic or on a towel and pat it into its original shape; drying it flat. If your woolens have become harsh, try a little fabric softener in the final rinse water for softer results.

Social Security

Is someone in your family disabled or retired? If the answer is yes, and you haven't already done so, you should contact your local Social Security office to find out if you or someone in your family is elegible for benefits.

Surprisingly, not all of those who are eligible for benefits under Social Security programs, apply. In these days of rising prices, no one can afford to ignore a possible source of income. Social security has four basis types of benefits:

— Retirement benefits are available to workers when they retire at age 62 or 65. The worker's spouse and dependent children, including stepchildren and adopted children may be eligible for benefits as well.

— Disability benefits are available to workers who are severely disabled – meaning a severe mental or physical condition which prevents work. To be eligible you must be disabled for at least one year, be expected to be disabled for a year, or have disability which is expected to result in death. Benefits can start for the sixth full month of disability and continue for as long as the disability continues. Disability benefits may also be available to the spouse and dependent children of workers.

— Survivors benefits go to certain family members when a worker dies. Benefits may be issued as monthly payments or a lump-sum payment, usually to the surviving spouse.

Medicare is a hospital and medical insurance program to help pay the health care costs of those age 65 or older and those who are severely disabled at any age.

If you are about to retire, if you are nearing your 65th birthday, if you or one of your dependents is disabled, or if you have been financially dependent on someone who has died, be sure to contact your local Social Security office.

Most Social Security questions can be handled by telephone. However, if you are ready to make a claim for benefits, go to the Social Security office and take your Social Security card or the number of the card of the person for whom you are claiming a benefit. Also take some proof of age, your W-2 federal income tax form or a copy of your last two years of income tax returns, and take any pertinent medical information.

Humanitarian world food aid program could use U.S. surplus, says NFU

DENVER, Co. — The National Farmers Union board of directors has sent a letter to President Ronald Reagan calling for the establishment of a humanitarian world food aid program that would utilize surplus U.S. agricultural commodities.

"The creation of this type of program to help feed the hungry millions throughout the poor countries of the world would be a fitting commemoration of World Food Day 1982

"Funding has already been appropriated for foreign aid and foreign military assistance programs that could be diverted for humanitarian purposes," the board said.

The food donation program recommended by the board was prompted by a "Mercy Food Program" proposal drafted by a coalition of concerned groups in South Dakota and spearheaded by the South Dakota Farmers Union. Under this proposal, the federal government would buy farm commodities at market prices plus storage costs for distribution to the hungry in the U.S. and overseas. Charitable private organizations would handle the distribution.

In addition to relieving hunger and bringing about positive changes in U.S. foreign aid programs, the food aid proposal would boost market prices by reducing the current U.S. surplus carry-over stocks, according to the Farmers Union.

Hunter safety attitudes good

UNIVERSITY PARK — Hunting accidents in Pennsylvania have declined almost every year since 1969 when hunter safety education became mandatory for first-time nimrods under age 16. In the same time span, the number of licensed hunters increased by over 156,000 in the Commonwealth.

The statwide safety program for young hunters was developed by the Pennsylvania Game Commission and the Department of Agricultural Education at Penn State.

The most recent project stressing hunter safety involving Penn State and the Game Commission was a study of hunter attitudes toward safety. This involved Philip H. Ogline of Denver, Lancaster County, who surveyed 420 Pennsylvania hunters as part of the requirements for a doctor of philosophy degree at Penn State.

Ogline found that the 12 to 15-year old hunters had slightly stronger attitudes toward safety than older nimrods. Hunters within the 21 to 40 age category showed the next most positive attitude toward safe handling of firearms.

The study involved persons who were victims of hunting accidents as well as those who had caused accidents. Some of the accidents studied were selfinflicted. Hunters not involved in accidents also were surveyed.

Regardless of the place of residence, all hunters held much the same positive attitude toward firearm safety. In addition, years of hunting experience had no apparent effect on hunter attitudes toward firearm safety.

Hunters showed a positive attitude toward safe handling of sporting arms regardless of their accident record.

Ogline noted that certain social and environmental pressures influence a hunter's safety attitude. Such pressures include "buck fever anxieties" and hunting conditions such as lighting and topography. The effects of these pressures and conditions should be studied, he suggested, to include them in the hunter safety program.

Enforcer get dominate Eastern Nat'l P. Hereford show

TIMONIUM, Md. — The get of the famous Polled Hereford bull, Enforcer 107H took a high percentage of championships at last week's Eastern National Livestock Show, including grand and reserve grand champion female, senior heifer, and reserve calf champion heifer, plus grand champion bull and champion bull calf, and reserve senior champion bull.

The grand champion female was exhibited by Dunwalke Farm and Humboldt Corp. of Far Hills, N.J. JJJ Miss Vici 107H 119, a May 7, 1981 daughter of Enforcer, led her class of junior heifer calves before taking the junior heifer championship and later the grand honors.

The reserve grand champion female also was tagged senior heifer champion by judge Pete Sweeney of East Lansing, Michigan. This Enforcer daughter was shown by Falklands Farm and Huckleberry Hall Farm. FLF Forcette 1003, a Jan. 4, 1981 heifer, was the first-place senior heifer calf.

Huckleberry Hall Farm of Smithsburg, Md. also exhibited the reserve calf champion, a Sept. 9, 1981 Enforcer daughter called HHF Enfortress 69N (pending). She was beaten in class by BFS PRL Justa Banner 56N, a Sept. 2 daughter of WSF PRL Justa Banner. This entry of Ace Polled Herefords of Millbrook, N.Y. and Battleground Farms, Salem, N.J. was tagged calf champion.

Along with their junior and grand champion female, Dunwalke Farm and Humboldt Corp. also claimed the reserve junior heifer champion ribbon with a June 17, 1981 daughter of the famous Polled Hereford female producer, Victorious K47 U81.

Judy Heflich of Belle Mead, N.J. exhibited the reserve senior heifer champion, the second-place senior heifer calf. ASB Joggers Maiden is a Feb. 12, 1981 daughter of Will Via Justa V, the champion "Jogger" bull.

In the bull competition, a Sept. 15, 1981 son of Enforcer claimed the champion bull calf honors and went on to capture the grand champion bull title for Ace Polled Herfords and Roy Brenizer.

Districts seek conservation teacher of year

LANCASTER — Nominations are being accepted for the national Conservation Teacher-Of-The-Year awards program according to Aaron Z. Stauffer, chairman, of the Lancaster County Conservation District. The competition is open to all full-time teachers working at the kindergarten through high school level who have developed an outstanding program of environmental education.

The National Conservation Teacher-Of-The-Year will receive $1,000 in cash and an expense paid trip to Denver, Colorado for the 1984 Annual Convention of the National Association of Conservation Districts. The national second-place winner receives a $500 cash award, and the first place regional winner will receive $200.

Co-sponsored by NACD and the Allis Chalmers Corporation, the purpose of the awards program is to encourage the development of creative learning experiences in conservation for young people.

"Any teacher in a public or private school in our conservation district who puts emphasis on environmental conservation as a regular part of the instructional program is eligible for nomination," said Aaron Stauffer.

Interested teachers can obtain additional information and nomination forms from the Lancaster County Conservation District, Room 6, Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Road, Lancaster, PA. 17601; telephone 717-299-5361.

The awards program also honors the conservation districts judged to have provided the most effective stimulas and help for conservation education programs within the District.

Veterinarians find vesicular stomatitis in two more states

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Department of Agriculture veterinarians have confirmed visicular stomatitis — a viral disease with symptoms much like foot-and-mouth disease — in two more western states — Nebraska and Montana.

According to John K. Atwell, deputy administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, this brings the total to eight states. Previously reported cases had been found in Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico, Utah, Arizona and Idaho.

So far, Atwell said, there have been 393 laboratory confirmations of the disease, which causes blister-like lesions in cattle, horses, sheep, swine and humans. The disease is usually short-lived and not fatal.

"USDA is involved in this outbreak because vesicular stomatitis cannot be clinically distinguished from foot-and-mouth disease," Atwell said. "Foot-and-mouth disease is a devastating foreign disease that does not exist in the United States. Therefore, we are investigating all reported cases to make sure foot-and-mouth does not enter the country and go unrecognized.

Vesicular stomatitis generally occurs at 10- to 15-year intervals, Atwell said. It is most often diagnosed near low-lying marshes, swamps and similar areas after periods of heavy rainfall and high humidity. When conditions are right, high populations of mosquitoes and gnats occur that may spread the disease.

Humans can be affected by the virus. Symptoms include blisters on the lips, tongue and foot and flu-like signs of the respiratory tract. Humans are only mildly affected in the current outbreak, in which 30 clinical cases have been reported.

Eastern Nat'l posts Simmental results

TIMONIUM, Md. — Both the grand champion heifer and the grand champion bull of the Simmental show during last week's Eastern National were sired by the famous bull, Signal.

The first-place senior heifer, Circle B Miss 67M, was tagged senior champion and grand by show judge Pete Sweeney of East Lansing, Michigan. For grand champion bull, Sweeney went to the intermediate bull champion, Excalibur (pending), a May 4, 1981 Signal son. Both grand champs were exhibited by Achilles Cattle Co. of Lexington, Ky.

York Co. Hereford breeders win at Eastern Nat'l

TIMONIUM, Md. — York County fared well at last week's Eastern National Livestock Show during the Hereford beef cattle competition as nine-year-old Sonja Shearer of R1 Abbottstown exhibited the reserve grand champion heifer while her father led several bull champions for Pigeon Hill Farm.

BHU L1 Dominette 893, a March 20, 1981 daughter of CL 1 Domino 987, was the first-place heifer in her class of early spring yearlings. Show judge Pete Sweeney of East Lansing, Michigan then selected her for reserve champion heifer calf and reserve grand champion.

While Sonja brought champion honors home from the female show, father Terry Shearer, herdsman for Pigeon Hill, led the farm's spring yearling entries to champion and reserve champion yearling honors and its two-year-old entry to reserve senior champion.

PH L1 Domino 71, a March 7, 1981 son of WCF L1 Domino 9264, was tagged champion yearling bull, while pasturemate PH Northern L1 281, an April 2, 1981 son of BH L1 Real 126 took reserve yearling honors. Pigeon Hill's reserve senior champion bull is CMF L1 Adv Dom C10, a March 24, 1980 son of L1 Adv Domino 7041.

Disk corn residue

NORRISTOWN — "Are your fields left virtually bare after corn harvest, with partially standing stalks? If so, put that crop residue to good use.

Shred and disk those stalks into the soil, recommends Tanya R. Mason of the Soil Conservation Service in Norristown. "This binds them to the surface, to protect your fields from erosion, caused by heavy spring rains," she explains.

"This measure should be implemented as soon after harvest as possible for immediate protection," says Mason.

For further information on crop residue use and other conservation practices, contact your local USDA Soil Conservation Service.

Limousin juniors vie for national titles

DENVER, COL. — A pair of Seven Forty Seven daughters recently walked away with both grand and reserve champion honors at the National Junior Limousin Heifer Show in Wichita, Kan.

The overall grand champion title went to Texs Star 878N, a March 1981 heifer owned by Neil Scott, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Payton Scott, Rising Star, Texas. The judge, Dr. Burt Moore of North Dakota State University, praised the 7/8 heifer for her straightness, balance and volume and also named her junior champion of the show and winner of class nine.

MK Lana, another Seven Forty Seven daughter, was named reserve champion overall. The fullblood September 1981 calf is owned by Vernon McKown, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gene McKown, Norman, Okla. McKown's heifer also won the champion calf title and class two with her frame, growth and femininity.

The bred and owned champion was a 7/8 Gibraltar daughter, owned by 21-year-old I.G. Janca III, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. G. Janca II, Elgin, Texas. The heifer, calved July 1981, caught the judge's eye with her correctness and natural thickness and won class three earlier in the show.

Matt Nelson, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daryl Nelson, Maysville, Mo., showed the reserve champion bred and owned heifer. Nelson's 15/16 heifer, a Limac Polled Northern daughter, was calved April 1981.

The best pair of heifers class was won by Richard McKown, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gene McKown, Norman, Okla.

Oklahoma picked up the best state group award, with three heifers owned by Shari Holloway, Richard McKown and Vernon McKown. Oklahoma also won the state herdsmanship award, with the team fitting contest going to Texas.

In the showmanship finals, 11-year-old Bret Begert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Begert, Allison, Texas, showed his way into first place in the 13 years old and younger division.

Dan Mewes, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Merv Mewes, Highmore, S.D., captured the showmanship title in the senior contest, in which eight finalists were given 30 minutes to fit wet heifers and then show them.

Finalists in each division were selected during the heifer show by showmanship judges Jack Eberspacher, Stillwater, Okla., Andy McCurry, Kansas Livestock Association; and Ed Sutton, Suwanee, Ga.

Improve woodlots by thinnings

UNIVERSITY PARK — Thinning a woodlot is something that every woodlot owner thinks about or does from time to time.

"In the past it was frequently difficult to justify the investment of time or money that was needed since the return from the sale of future crops was usually a long time away. But the energy crisis," says James Finley, Penn State Extension forestry specialist, "provided us with many incentives to change the way we do things, from driving habits to heating our homes with wood."

If you heat your home with wood and own or have access to a woodlot, thinning to improve the stand is possible. But, how do your begin and what is thinning are two questions we need to think about.

To a lot of owners the removal of dead trees is thinning. "This may make the stand of trees look better, cleaner or better organized but actually it does little to improve," said Finley. Removal of dead trees may even detract from the woods because certain birds, animals and insects that depend on dead trees may leave to find a new home or source of food.

To improve a woodlot by thinning you must harvest or remove live trees. Which live trees should go first is perhaps difficult to answer without knowing your woodlot. But, more than likely the candidates for cutting should be competing with the trees you want to keep. Trees compete for essentailly three things; water, nutrients and light. Light is the one thing in a woodlot readily adjustable by cutting competitors, Finley explains.

"Nature depends heavily on light to thin stands over time and the individual trees that win or lose this ongoing battle for light may not be the species or quality of trees that you want to keep for a future crop. However, by deciding what trees to keep and then providing them room to spread out their leaf surface, you have improved the stand," he concludes.

Parting with Chinese tradition helps boost U.S. wheat exports

WASHINGTON D.C. — U. S. marketing projects in China have given rise to a relatively new Chinese product — baked bread — and a twist to a very old one — noodles.

Representatives of the U.S. wheat industry and the U.S. Department of Agriculture have helped the Chinese establish a bakery in Beijing and a pilot plant to produce instant noodles in Shanghai.

The plants will be beneficial to both American farmers and Chinese consumers, according to Seeley Lodwick, undersecretary of agriculture, who recently led a team of government and private industry specialists to China.

"American farmers will increase their wheat exports to China, and the Chinese will benefit from the convenience of these two new wheat products." Lodwick said. "In 1981/82, China imported 7.6 million metric tons of U.S. wheat valued at $1.2 billion, and this cound double in the next decade."

Lodwick and three industry representatives were in China in late August to inspect the model bakery and noodle plant, discuss trade prospects with Chinese officials and partricipate in ceremonies opening export promotional offices for the U.S. wheat, soybean and feed grain industries.

As part of a drive toward modernization, Chinese policy is designed to improve and expand the variety of food available to consumers. Baked loaf bread is considered one of the first steps in providing more variety in diets as well as providing a "convenience food" for workers, Lodwick said.

In China, flour-based food products are made almost entirely in the home, using traditional methods. The Chinese make homemade bread by placing lumps of dough on a wooden rack over boiling water, where they are cooked by steam — a time-consuming process.

Commercially produced loaf bread will greatly reduce the amount of time required for meal preparation and should increase the demand for wheat products.

As for noodles, the Chinese way of making them has not changed since Marco Polo recorded his first tasting in the 13th century. It was Marco, according to legend, who introduced Chinese noodles into Italy, thereby giving birth to the Italian passion for spaghetti.

Seven centuries later, noodles remain a popular food in China despite the time and effort required to prepare them, and representatives of the U.S. wheat industry believe that low-cost instant noodles can greatly expand the use of American wheat in China. The noodle plant is a prototype for small plants to be built throughout the industrialized cities of Chine. Lodwick said that the introduction of instant noodles has caused a new surge in demand in Japan, Tqiwan, South Korea and more recently in the United States.

The model bakery, constructed in Beijing by U.S. Wheat Associates, USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service and the Chinese Ministry of Light Industries, is fully operational with a production of 1,500 one-pound loaves of bread per hour.

Winston Wilson, president of U.S. Wheat Associates, said the bakery is a demonstration and training unit to teach Chinese bakers to make quality low-cost bread. U.S. Wheat Associates also plans to build a flour mill jointly with the Ministry of Commerce in Beijing.

Lodwick was accompanied by Wilson, Jeffery Gains, executive director of the American Soybean Association, and Kent Brady, international director for Asia of the U.S. Feed Grains Council. They participated Aug. 21 in an opening ceremony in Beijing of export promotional offices for the three organizations, which are Foreign Agricultural Service market development cooperators.

The opening of the trade offices represents a long-term commitment by U.S. farmers to work on mutually beneficial market-development projects with China.

The Chinese also have started to expand production of livestock products, especially pork, poultry meat and eggs. The U.S. Feed Grains Council and the American Soybean Association plan to work with livestock producer organizations and with the Ministry of Commerce to update mixed feed production. The two organizations have been distributing technical information on livestock production and have contacted various Chinese groups to launch activities in the livestock production sector.

While the import demand for feedgrains and soybean meal imports initially is somewhat slow, Lodwick said, there is little doubt that over the next decade the Chinese market offers real potential for sales of both commodities from the United States. He said he expects the presence of U.S. cooperator groups will speed up the process of introducing the Chinese to U.S. livestock production methods.

PFA calls for improved rural bridges

CAMP HILL — The condition of rural bridges, owned by the state, county and railroad companies, are deteriorating at a rapid rate with some beyond the point of being salvageable, according to a statement released here recently by Keith Eckel, president of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association.

"Some work has been done recently to restore our rural roads and bridges," the farm leader said, "but the present situation has been building for the past 20 years of little or no attention being paid to rural bridges.

"Farmers are finding it increasingly more precarious to move their product to market, and production supplies to the farm, because of the shocking condition of the bridges in our state.

"We actually have deep fear for the safety of rural residents using the bridges," the state farm leader remarked, "besides the tremendous amount of time lost by farmers and other businessmen because of detours forced on the truck traffic.

"Ultimately, the consumer pays for this increased cost of running those extra 15 to 30 miles to avoid a bridge with a weight restriction because of poor maintenance," Eckel said.

Eckel called for an immediate four-point program to be implemented: (1) Survey all bridges in the state to establish a priority list for restoration; (2) provide the necessary state funding to repair and maintain bridges on a regular basis; (3) make temporary repairs to bridges with weight limitations to accommodate the necessary traffic for a given area, and (4) widen all one-lane bridges on state highways to two lanes.

As far as county situation is concerned, Eckel said he believes that additional monies from the liquid fuel finds should be allocated to assist in updating state bridge maintenance.

Eckel cited bridges in Lancaster, Crawford, Cumberland, Mercer and Bradford counties to emphasize the point that it was a statewide issue.

Here are those he cited as in poor condition and having an adverse effect on local farmers and businessmen:

Lancaster County:

Kirk's Bridge, Route 272, the main link between the city of Lancaster, southern Lancaster and neighboring Chester County has a three-ton weight limit. The weight limit forces farmers and milk haulers to drive 20 miles one-way on secondary roads.

Railroad bridge, 741 at Gap has a three-ton limit which forces truckers to travel an extra 15 miles each way to avoid it. Milk haulers, collecting milk from dairy farms, find it increasingly more difficult to carry out their assigned pickup schedules.

Railroad bridge on Route 896 has a four-ton limitation with grainery on one side, but farmers on the other are forced to use much more narrow, secondary roads to reach the grainery because of the poor bridge condition.

Cumberland County:

Railroad bridge, quarter mile south of Newville on Route 233, has nine-ton restriction forcing truckers to travel 10 miles one-way to avoid bridge. Trucks in this case travel narrow, winding secondary roads. A survey of businesses in the area show some 600 trucks are affected daily by the weight limitation.

Mercer County:

Bridge on Route 322, near Greenville, has a 10-ton weight restriction, cutting off a number of dairy farms to the south of the bridge from normal milk collection routes. Milk haulers are forced to travel at least another 16 miles south to Greenville and back track north to Jamestown to reach these farms. Greenville has a number of bridges on main roads with posted weight limits, [illegible] these milk trucks to cross.

Crawford County:

Bridge on Legislative Route 069 has a 10-ton restriction forcing farmers to travel an extra 12 miles each way. The road is the main link between Venango and Woodcock.

Bradford County:

Ulster Bridge, crossing the Susquehanna River, on Legislative Route 08077 has a 20-ton weight limit, forcing milk haulers to make twice as many runs as necessary. Farmers near this bridge are virtually land-locked because of the weight limitation.

Nitrogen helps convert wheat stubble into humus

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. — An estimated 213 billion pounds of field stubble will remain after the 1982 winter wheat crop is harvested, and much of it can be swiftly turned into humus with the help of nitrogen solutions, according to Monte G. Edlund, director of agronomy for Phillips Chemical Company, a subsidiary of Phillips Petroleum Company.

"As a general rule, winter wheat leaves behind 100 pounds of stubble for every bushel harvested," Edlund notes, "and U.S. government forecasts call for a 2.13 billion-bushel harvest this year, up two percent from 1981."

He recommends spraying crop residues with a nitrogen solution, because of the speed, ease and uniformity of application. Also, the liquid material tends to stick to the straw to enhance microbial breakdown. Better contact means an accelerated rate of decomposition.

Urea-ammonium nitrate solution is ideal for treating any of a broad range of crop residues. It speeds straw decomposition and release of nitrogen and is well adapted to all the types of application used in the various reduced tillage systems. As a spray, it accurately covers cloddy, trashy, rough terrain.

Edlund offers these pointers:

- Any good single-form nitrogen solution can be used to hasten residue decomposition. Preferably, the solution should contain nitrogen in three forms — ammonium nitrate, ammonium, and urea.

"The fast-acting nitrate is available immediately, and the urea nitrogen, which is mobile in the soil, is converted almost entirely to ammonium within a few days," he explains. "Meanwhile the ammonium, because it is immobile, is stored for later conversion to nitrate. By the time the ground is worked again, the leftover residue should be well on its way to becoming stable humus."

- For best results the crop residue should be spread out and incorporated as evenly as possible with the solution, Edlund cautions. Also, adequate levels of field moisture are necessary for good decomposition. If conditions are too dry, decomposition slows considerably. Waterlogged soil, however, stops decomposition entirely because without free oxygen available nitrifying bacteria cannot survive.

- Soil temperature is equally important. Soil organisms that break down organic matter are most active when ground temperatures range anywhere from 70 degrees F to 100 degrees F. As the temperature drops the organisms become less active and at the freezing mark, "they cease to function altogether," he says.

- Acid soil tends to inhibit the rate of stubble decomposition. The optimum pH is about 8.0. Though most soils will not be this high, he indicates, a good liming program will help tremendously.

Increasing the nitrogen percentage of the average wheat straw as little as one percent is enough to speed decomposition and allow the release of mineral nitrogen to the soil. As a general rule, 20 pounds of nitrogen added to a ton of crop residue will allow rapid decomposition to take place.

Pa. fieldwork runs ahead of "schedule"

HARRISBURG — Statewide six days were rated suitable for fieldwork for the week ending Oct. 10 according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service. In the northern and southern regions of the state six days were rated suitable, while in the central region reporters rated five days suitable for fieldwork.

Activities for the week included harvesting corn silage, soybeans, grain corn, potates, tomatoes, cabbage and apples; plowing; planting wheat and barley; and making hay.

Topsoil moisture in Pennsylvania was rated adequate by 55 percent of our reporters and short by 45 percent.

By the end of the week 54 percent of the corn crop was mature and five percent was harvested compared with last year's average of 70 percent mature and 12 percent harvested. Corn silage was 84 percent harvested compared with 79 percent harvested at this time last year.

Soybean harvest progressed rapidly and by week's end 27 percent of the state's crop was harvested compared with five percent harvested last year at this time. The northern region was 31 percent harvested, central region 33 percent harvested, and the southern region 20 percent harvested.

Statewide, 90 percent of the potato crop was harvested compared with 82 percent harvested last year. In the northern region 87 percent was harvested, in the central region 92 percent was harvested, and in the southern region 93 percent was harvested.

Barley planting in the Commonwealth was virtually completed during the past week compared with 92 percent of the crop seeded at this time last year.

By the end of the week 69 percent of the wheat crop was planted, compared with 81 percent planted last year. In the northern region 75 percent was planted, in the central region 73 percent was planted, and in the southern region 65 percent was planted.

Statwide, fall plowing was 90 percent complete compared with last year's average of 85 percent complete.

Third crop alfalfa was 94 percent harvested, while at this time last year the third crop was virtually completed. The fourth crop alfalfa was 45 percent harvested this week compared with 47 percent last year.

The quality of hay made during the week was rated good by 46 percent of the reporters, fair by 42 percent and poor by 12 percent. The amount of feed obtained from pastures was rated average by 68 percent and below average by 32 percent of the reporters.

Pork Producers accept report

DES MOINES, IA — The final report of the Pork Value Task Force received the unanimous approval of the Board of Directors of the National Pork Producers Council.

In their August 2 meeting, NPPC's board reviewed the recommendations of the Task Force which would provide an incentive to pork producers to raise a hog which gives consumers the lean meat they desire.

"We charged the Task Force with a heavy responsibility to develop a program to lead the industry toward further progress in reducing fat and increasing lean at the meat counter. They have performed admirably and recommended a system which will pay a premium for leaner hogs. Now its up to the industry to further perfect the program and implement it," said John Saunders, President of NPPC.

Under the proposed program, producers would utilize a value guide and picture of the ideal hog to evaluate the market value of their herd.

"We believe these tools will give the producers the feedback he needs to improve his herd and receive a premium for that improvement," said Wayne Walter, NPPC Vice-President and Chairman of the Task Force.

Walter also added that the value guide uses two measurements, backfat and weight, to arrive at a percentage for each hog above or below the base market price. In addition, evaluation of muscling is also considered in the final percentage. This percentage gives the producer the approximate worth of his hog based on the merit of the hog or carcass.

According to Walter, the next step is to develop materials and a communications plan to present the program to producers, markets and packers.

During the final meeting, each Task Force member reported on the reaction of his segment to the program, and how they might participate in the program. Differences of opinion were expressed on the methods of implementing the program and on some aspects of the program, but there was unanimous agreement that the goal of getting rid of fat was essential to the industry's success.

Energy intake affects milk protein content

UNIVERSITY PARK — Nutrition and feeding practices have less effect on the protein content of milk than milk fat test, according to Richard S. Adams, Penn State Extension dairy specialist.

"Energy intake may have an appreciable influence on the percentage of protein in milk," he says. If the total ration, forage plus concentrate, does not meet energy needs and body fat reserves are depleted, the protein content of milk may drop between one-tenth and four tenths percent.

Low energy intake results primarily from inadequate forage intake and/or the feeding or poor quality forage made from perennials or annuals other than whole plant corn. Sometimes insufficient concentrate feeding is involved. The average dairy herd, however, is fed more concentrate than necessary.

Adams says the energy content of the concentrate portion of the ration is not critical in most herds, since the amounts of concentrate fed may be adjusted to reflect usual differences in TDN or NE lactaction levels. Fats supplementation to increase energy in concentrates sometimes may reduce protein test.

Since some producers now receive payments or bonuses for milk based on milk protein as well as milkfat test, interest in factors influencing protein level has increased. All herds enrolled in the various DHI testing programs in Pennsylvania now receive monthly protein tests on each milking animal. This provides an opportunity for all dairy famrers to monitor their herds protein test situation.

Farmers interested in enrolling their herd in a DHI program should contact their county agricultural Extension office. Assistance with rations is available to all farmers through the Penn State Forage Testing Service, as well as other sources. Producers wanting more information on forage and feed analysis, as well as feed programming should also contact their county agent.

New tagging procedure for deer harvest

HARRISBURG — A new tagging procedure for deer harvested by hunters will be instituted in Pennsylvania this year.

Prior to 1982, hunters took the deer tag attached to the hunting license and tied it to the deer. Numerous hunters "forgot" to take along a string or twine to tie the tag to the deer, or found the tag tearing off while dragging the deer, or simply re-used the tag to take subsequent deer. Information needed for game management purposes was often lacking or illegible.

The new tagging procedure is designed to overcome the shortcomings of the old system. This new procedure has been used in New York for several years.

A deer carcass tag continues to be a part of the hunting license, as in the past. The tag is similar to tags of previous years, but there is more room for vital information.

When a hunter harvests a deer, the carcass tag must be filled out and separated from the hunting license within an hour after the deer is harvested, and before the animal is moved.

A separate deer ear tag in strip form (DuPont Tyvek material), ten inches long and an inch and a half wide, also is furnished with each 1982 hunting license. This strip tag also has the matching regular hunting license number pre-printed on it.

There also is a series of numbers on the strip tag to indicate the month, date and hour of the kill. Three triangular notches must be cut from this strip tag with a knife to show exactly when the deer was taken. Any knife sharp enough to gut a deer will be adequate to notch the ear tag strip.

The entire back of this ear strip tag is covered with adhesive and a backing material, divided into two sections, A and B. Section "A" backing should be peeled from the strip, and the properly completed carcass tag previously removed from the hunting license should be attached to the adhesive on the strip. The strip should not be moistened at any time — it is a self-adhering adhesive.

A slit must then be made with a knife about half an inch from the side of and near the base of either ear. Section "B" of the ear tag strip is to be fed through the slit in the ear. The backing should then be removed from Section "B" and the end of the ear tag strip must be brought up and around the edge of the ear. The "B" section of the strip is then to be joined together by pressing the adhesive surfaces to each other. Instructions/drawings on the back side of the strip ear tag should be followed.

If the slit is made in the hairy part of the ear, a taxidermist will have no trouble in mounting the trophy. If the slit is made where there is no hair, it will mean extra work (and added expense) for the taxidermist.

When the preceding instructions are followed, the carcass tag will be visible for inspection. The tag and strip must remain attached to the ear of the deer until removed by a licensed taxidermist, or until the head is discarded.

The new tagging procedure is designed to prevent deer tags from being lost or used more than once, and to provide more accurate data needed to properly manage Pennsylvania's deer herd.

Plan now for adequate forage

Feeding adequate quantities of forage is the basis of profitable dairy feeding program, says Sam Dum, Penn State Extension farm management specialist.

At this time of year dairymen should appraise the supply of forage they need for their dairy herd until the next year's crop production is available and determine how their needs will be met.

For Pennsylvania dairymen, the non-cropping barn feeding period is approximately 210 to 240 days. During this period, a dairy cow will require approximately 4 tons hay equivalent, a yearling heifer 2 ¼ tons, and a 1 to 12 month old animal, ¾ ton hay equivalent, explains Dum.

Now that the quantity of hay forages for the 1982 cropping year is fairly well determined, dairymen will need to supply the remainder of their forage needs with corn silage. A good corn crop this year make this readily possible. To plan quantities of corn silage required, consider 3 tons of corn silage equal to 1 ton of hay.

If permanent silo storage is not currently available, corn silage can be stored without excessive loss by such means as plastic covered stacks and trenches.

Plan now to have adequate forage, and plan how to store it for the coming barn-feeding period. Consider the use of corn silage to meet additional forage needs, adds Dum.

Gehl has Put Good Ideas to Work in their 1850 Total Density Control round balers. With the patented "air-draulic" system, you control the size of the bale's center core and the density of the outer wrap to fit your operation and the crop's moisture content. The 1850 can produce bales 61" wide and up to 72" in diameter. Stop in today for more information on Gehl's 1850 heavyweight champs.

GUNITE Silo Relining & Repairs

Extensive tests have been conducted on Gunite. Below are some of the properties of Gunite:
1. Excellent bonding
2. High Density
3. Extreme strength and hardness
4. High resistance to absorption

The excellent physical properties of the material are due to the water content being only the amount needed to satisfy chemical hydration.

Reseal and restrengthen your silo with Gunite.

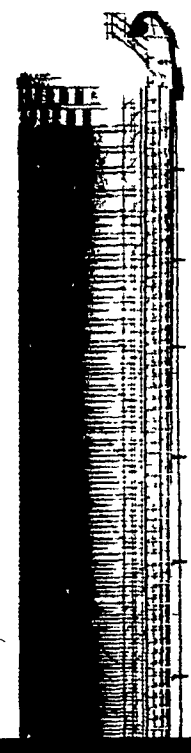
WHEN IT COMES TO UPRIGHT STORAGE, NOBODY BUT MADISON CAN CLAIM SO MANY "FIRSTS."



Madison structures have been going up on American farms for 65 years. Today, in spite of competition from many other companies, one out of every four silos in America is a Madison! Here are some of the reasons.

FIRST Madison was first to offer a concrete stave, bottom-unloading, atmosphere-controlled feed storage and processing system.

FIRST Madison developed the Vibra-Cor® stave for greater load-bearing capability and better insulation.

FIRST Madison pioneered the fiberglass sealed roof for atmosphere-controlled structures.

FIRST Madison developed the double-rafter silo roof.

FIRST Madison was first to develop its own silo accessories, each designed to be the best available.

FIRST Madison pioneered the fiberglass chute cover and skylight.

FIRST Madison pioneered the safer high-back platform filler stand.

FIRST Madison offered the first industrial-type caged ladder for better protection.

FIRST Madison pioneered the "hoop tensioning follow-up program" to assure maximum structural integrity by torque-testing each hoop, after installation

FIRST Madison pioneered the use of Gunite for better inside finish in all atmosphere-controlled structures.

Before you buy upright storage, talk to your Madison dealer. He's first in a lot of ways and he wants to prove it to you.

Are Your Calves Worth Saving? Do They Get The Best?

Certainly the major reasons for hutches are their value to calf health and survival of young calves. However, now we would like to share with you the advantages of our shelters over home built structures.

Plywood hutches are often heavy and awkward to move. Shell Valley calf shelters only weigh about 110 lbs. and can be moved easily. Their structure allows nesting while transporting and storing.

The initial investment of plywood shelters is somewhat less, but often not considered in this cost are labor, maintenance, and replacement costs. Wooden hutches usually need to be painted every two to three years. Our boat-like construction is virtually maintenance free. A good plywood shelter will last 6 to 10 years. There is no reason our shelter will not last 4 to 6 times as long, being fire resistant and 100% repairable.

Not only is our unit easy to clean, transport, and store; fiberglass is a natural insulator. It's white gelcoat finish keeps calves cool during the hot summer and warm through the winter.

We hope you will share our conclusion, as many do, that fiberglass shelters are long-lasting, more economical, and offer the best prospects for good health and survival of young calves.

Our product is a 'big ticket' item that lessens production costs of a farmer. Income potential is $35,000 plus. Territory would be Lancaster and Chester County areas. Inquiries are treated confidentially.

Little girl, big hog, fat bank account

MANHEIM — In coming years when Beth Nestleroth looks back on her debut in 4-H fair showing, she'll have a lot to remember.

Last week, her spotted red Duroc-Yorkshire-Landrace barrow took the grand championship of the Manheim Farm Show in only her second outing in a show ring and her first at a local fair.

Then, as icing on the cake, the long, lean 226-pound barrow brought a record price on Friday, Oct. 8, to get the nine-year-old's educational dowry (or whatever she plans to save for) off to a good start.

The red spot brought a record $6.35 a pound for a total of $1,435.10 and got the sale off to a rousing start and had the audience buzzing.

As at any auction, it only takes two to make it interesting. And the two on the hog were Hatfield, traditional champion seeker, and local packer, Kunzler and Co.

As Beth's amazed father, county breeder Mark Nestleroth, remarked: "The bids were flying fast and furious for awhile."

And when the bidding dust settled, Wilmer Kreider had given the winning nod of his head for Kunzler.

And the reserve champion hog shown by Chris Chapman didn't fare badly either and maintained some of the pace set by the champ. Her 210-pounder brought a respectable $3.00 a pound – as much and sometimes more than some grand champs brought this year. This time, Hatfield was successful.

After that, prices fell rapidly into the 80-cent range for the other champions. The average for the sale, without champions, was 64 cents a pound. With champions, it was 71 cents. And a total of 119 head were sold.

Jim Stauffer's grand champion 100-pound Suffolk ewe brought $1.50 a pound. Again, the winning bidder was Kreider, Willie the Butcher, decked out in smart houndstooth "Bear Bryant" type hat, instead of his traditional Willie baseball cap.

The reserve champion lamb of Mike Garman brought $1.00 a pound. The 35 lambs averaged 70 cents a pound, with champions.

The reserve champion FFA steer of Vernon Heisey was bought by J.H. Brubaker, Inc. lumberyard for 91 cents a pound.

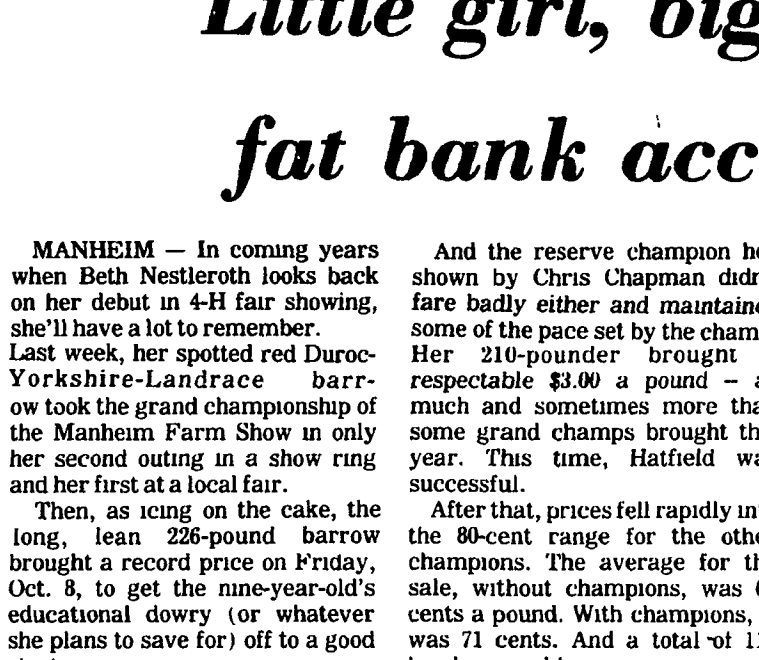
Other buyers included McCracken Feed Mill, Beacon Milling Co., Walter M. Dunlap and Sons, Smucker Butcher Shop, Dale Kulp, Geib's Feed Mill, G. and G. Feed, M. Hoffer, Young's Minerals, Dutch Valley Farms, White Oak Mills, Steve Nicolas, Jacob Geib, Duane Hoover, Ronald Rohrer Construction, Erway Poultry, Elam Ginder, Groff Home Dressed Meats, Moyer Packing, Umberger's Store, Penway Construction, Naoh Kreider and Sons, Laudermilch Home Dressed Meats.



Familiar Hatfield banner, held by Doug Clemens, is draped over reserve champion hog of Manheim Farm Show exhibited by Chris Chapman. It brought $3.00 a pound.

Welsh Black assn. meets

FLETCHER, Ok — Breeders of Welsh Black cattle from all sections of the United States met recently at Carol Snyder's Log Cabin Ranch at Fletcher to elect officers and plan for future events.

Glenn Aamondt of Alexander, N.D. was re-elected president; Jim Case of Shelburn, Ind., vice president; and Sue Case of Shelburn, Ind., secretary-treasurer. Members of the board of directors are Max Allen of Waconia, Minn., Peter Darby of Earlville, N.Y.; Oscar Selle of Grand Island, Neb. and Carol Snyder. The organization was formed about 10 years ago to promote the breed.

Plans were made to host the 1983 meeting in North Dakota. Approval was given to amend the registration requirements in order to introduce the polled factor.

Welsh Black cattle were first introduced into the United States from Wales in 1966.

Willie the Butcher, Wilmer Kreider, left, also was buyer of the championship lamb of Jim Stauffer. With them is Donna Hess, Farm Show Queen.

Course focuses on milk truck maintenance

UNIVERSITY PARK — Penn State recently announced a series of one-night courses on milk truck maintenance and repairs for independent milk haulers.

According to program instructor Jim Beierlein, Extension economist, the program will offer suggestions aimed at lowering operating costs, breakdowns and downtime for repairs, with special reference to milk route pick-up.

The course will feature Frank Farrell, current supervisor of Guaranteed Maintenance for the Mack Truck Company in Allentown. Farrell, who has supervised similar courses in New York and Vermont, will present his specially designed course for the small owner-operator with 10 trucks or less.

Entitled "Keep 'Em Rolling," the courses are scheduled in four different regions in the state and all will begin with a dinner at 6 :30 p.m. followed by lectures. According to Beirlein, the programs are expected to end by 9 p.m.

The first meeting will take place on Monday, October 18 at Shaeffer's Pink Apple Restaurant on Route 6 in Tunkhannock, Wyoming County.

The program moves to western Pennsylvania on Tuesday, October 19 at the Meadville Holiday Inn off of exit 36A on I-79 in Meadville, Crawford County.

On Wednesday, October 20, the course will be offered in Greensburg, Westmoreland County, at the Mountainview Inn on Route 30.

The final meeting will be held on Thursday, October 21 in Lancaster, Lancaster County, at the Landis Valley Motor Inn on Route 272.

The cost of the course is $10 per person. For more information and reservations contact the county agents in Wyoming, Crawford, Westmoreland and Lancaster Counties.

World hunger arguments

There's no real reason for American meat eaters to have a guilty conscience. Their habit isn't causing world hunger, according to Department of Agriculture experts. And if they were to stop eating meat, it would not cure the world hunger problem.

There is a long-standing rgument that meat production is a waste of agricultural resources. That grain fed to livestock could better be used as human food. Critics of the meat industry point out that it takes more than six pounds of grain to produce a pound of beef in feedlot confinement. And vast acreages are thus diverted from more important food production.

It would be rather difficult to convince American grain farmers that the world's hungry would be better off if we stopped producing meat animals. After all, farmers are wallowing in another record crop of feed grains. They're into fall harvest with prices at a near record lows, considering the inflated dollar they're receiving.

Surpluses are steadily building in American granaries and the American farmer is looking for a better market. He needs all the meat animals possible to consume that large grain crop. Even then there's plenty left over.

USDA economist Donnel O'Flynn has pulled together some figures that indicate cutting out meat production in the United States would not help the world hunger problem. He says, "The reason that so much of the world's grain goes to livestock is that consumers in wealthier nations can afford to pay for it." And he points out that if their demand for livestock products fell off, prices would plummet and feed grain production would actually decrease. This would result in relatively little benefit to the poor.

Perhaps if agriculture were run by the government in every country, as it is in Russia, decrees could be issued that would force farmers to grow food crops that could be used directly by people. And if livestock were eliminated, or the amount of grain-fed livestock drastically reduced, obviously more acres would be available for food crop production.

But in our free enterprise system and in some other countries, it just doesn't work that way. No one tells a farmer what to grow, it's more a matter of responding to opportunities. If a farmer thinks corn prices are going to be strong, he'll grow corn, or whatever other crops he is capable of growing that look like a good bet.

Unfortunately for American farmers right now, most of them are locked into two or three major feed grain crops and they have little choice. They knew going into this year's production that wheat, corn and soybeans would all be relatively low priced. A bumper crop in this country and some world considerations have forced prices even lower than anticipated.

Most farmers will lose money on their entire production this year. Some may break even, and few will show any profit at all. So next year they'll make their decisions based on past history and what they see as future opportunity. And within the limitations of their farming systems, they'll plant what they think is going to be most profitable, not what the world's hungry people need the most.

The fact is the world's hungry, given a choice, would like to have more rice—a crop that doesn't do well in this country. There are regions where it can be grown, but they're limited and rice production does take special knowledge and special equipment. There are other food products that might find world demand, but they're somewhat limited. Again, if there were a world market, American farmers would certainly respond to it. It has nothing to do with their loyalty to the livestock industry. A grain farmer in Kansas would grow sugarcane instead of corn if it would make more money. A rice farmer in Texas would grow wheat if that seemed the most profitable, and a Delmarva corn and soybean farmer would readily switch to something else, especially after this year, if he could see a long-term opportunity.

Farmers themselves, ag college research and Extension personnel are constantly looking for new crops—ones that are suited to the geographic conditions, that meet a need in the marketplace, and that farmers can adjust to. Locally, they've looked at such diverse crops as malt barley, sunflowers, sugar beets, and a wide range of vegetable crops, hoping to come up with something that farmers could grow as an alternative to corn and soybeans in those years when prices look less than favorable.

Obviously, the livestock industry has a concern that enough corn and soybeans are produced. They demonstrated that concern in the marketplace by paying enough to keep farmers producing. Or, they pay what they have to pay to get the volume they need. In a surplus situation, they are apt to be paying farmers less than the cost of production. And over the long haul, unless prices improve, farmers will find some alternatives.

After a disastrous crop year money-wise, you can bet local farmers are going to take a hard look at some alternatives. If the market is there for food crops, and if they feel they have the ability to produce for those markets, there'll be some adjustments. The only relationship between that and world hunger has to do with economics. If world hunger creates a demand, if that demand causes certain crop prices to increase, then farmers will respond.

But right now most of the world hunger seems to exist in nations that have limited ability to buy in the world market. Consequently, they do little to stimulate prices and demand. And so grain farmers continue to produce corn and soybeans for the American livestock market and in a limited way for the world livestock

Farmland Preservation ~ It's worth it

AN END AND A BEGINNING. Every beginning leads to an eventual end and following each end comes a new beginning. Such is the perpetual nature of life itself. And one of the most important perpetual regenerations is that of agriculture. In the photo, taken near Elm, Lancaster County, is captured an example of such a rural revival. The shocks of corn are silent monuments to a season just past. And in the background, a farmer turns the soil to begin a new season. AN END AND A BEGINNING.

Be on lookout for soybean cyst nematode

NEWARK, Del. — The soybean harvest is about to start in Delaware. As growers drive combines through fields, they should be on the lookout for trouble spots — places where beans didn't do as well as expected.

"There could be several reasons for stunted, unproductive plants," says University of Delaware Extension plant pathologist Bob Mulrooney. "But if most of these can be ruled out, suspect the soybean cyst nematode."

Likely targets of this destructive pest are fields which have been in continuous soybean production for two years or more, or those in parts of the state where the nematode has already been found.

"If you've been in soybeans a long time, there's a good chance your problem was caused by the nematode," Mulrooney says. "We know of about 3,000 acres of cropland in Kent and Sussex counties that are now infested. That may not seem like much out of 260,000 to 280,000 acres, but there could be more that haven't been identified yet."

Early detection can save considerably on yield reductions when control steps are taken, the specialist says. "I've been able to show 33 percent yield reductions from the soybean cyst nematode in my plot work around the state. If it's normal to expect a 30-bushel yield per acre from a particular field, expect to get only 20 bushels or less if the nematode is present."

Fall is a good time to check suspected fields for soybean cyst nematode because infestations are now at their seasonal peak.

Positive diagnosis of SCN depends on examination of soyban roots for cysts, or soil for the presence of cysts. This usually takes an experienced eye or laboratory observation. Once the nematode has been identified in a field, several steps can be taken to control it. Traditional controls include rotation to a non-host crop, or planting resistant soybean varieties.

"Anyone who is in constant soybeans should rotate varieties to incorporate resistant ones into their cropping scheme," Mulrooney says. "This will help prevent buildup of the cyst nematode." He has been testing soybean varieties for SCN resistance under Delaware conditions at the university's Georgetown substation for the past four years. Last summer this work was partially funded by a grant from the Delaware Soybean Board. The trials show some big differences in varietal resistance, he says.

Farmers who suspect a soybean cyst nematode infestation on their land should collect and submit samples to their county extension agent. Take samples from the edge of obviously damaged areas in the crop row. This is where nematode populations are highest.

Collect samples at a depth of eight inches in the row from 20 to 25 locations, using a soil probe or spade. Samples should include both roots and soil. Mix soil cores in a plastic bucket and immediately place one or two pints of the mixture in a plastic bag. Label bags with the field number and location. Try to take samples from moist soil — neither too wet nor too dry. It shouldn't be frozen either.

Protect samples from temperature extremes and don't let them dry out. Do not add water. Do not leave them in the sun or on the dashboard of a closed vehicle. Deliver specimens to be diagnosed for SCN to county extension offices in Newark, Dover or Georgetown. For more information on the sampling and testing procedure, call your county agent.

Nat'l Forest Products Week Oct. 17-23

SPRING GROVE — Trees are America's renewable resource. According to Thomas R. Wieland, Tree Farm Family Forester of the Glatfelter Pulp Wood Compnay, Spring Grove, Pennsylvania, the week of Oct. 17-23 has been proclaimed National Forest Products Week.

In making the proclamation President Reagon recognized the importance of forest products to our nation and the renewability of the forest, the basic resource, that provides these products, noted Wieland.

The forest industries of south-central Pennsylvania play an important role in the local economy. Thousands of jobs are provided by paper mills, sawmills, logging contractors and associated wood using industries. These businesses purchase much of the timber needed for their operations from local woodland owners thus providing additional income to the area economy.

As petroleum products become more expensive and difficult to obtain, wood will play an even greater role. Today's forest yields lumber, fiber for paper, packaging products, fuel wood and much more, Wieland pointed out.

"Forest products are essential to everyday living and so is the proper management of our forests. Through sound forest practices the land can produce the necessary forest products and provide pure water, habitat for wildlife and a recreation haven for an expanding population." Wieland said.

market. Meanwhile, they fume about foreign subsidies, tariffs, and other restrictions that make them less than competitive in that world market.

So forget the argument about meat eaters taking the bread from the mouths of hungry people. Maybe it doesn't sound humanitarian, but farmers respond to market demand, not emotional appeal. This nation has plenty of crops and plenty more productive capacity. It's up to the nations with hungry people to make their needs known in the marketplace--then watch American farmers respond to whatever that market is.

Deutz-Fahr introduces mid-size tractor

ATLANTA, Ga. — The newest Deutz-Fahr tractor, the D 7807 rated at 73 pto hp, is being introduced at selected farm shows and Deutz-Fahr dealerships this fall, according to spokesmen of Deutz Corporation, Agricultural Equipment Division.

The new mid-size tractor offers a choice between the Deutz-Fahr D 6807 at 68 pto hp and the Deutz-Fahr DX 90 at 84 pto hp. It expands the firm's line to nine basic models from 43 to 140 pto hp. Like all Deutz-Fahr tractors, it is available with 2-wheel or 4-wheel (mechanically powered front wheels) drive.

According to a company spokesman, the D 7807 is powered by a 4-cylinder, 249-cu. in., naturally aspirated engine from the Deutz direct air-cooled 913 diesel engine series, giving this tractor exceptional lugging ability for heavy-duty field applications. High fuel efficiency, combined with a 24-gallon fuel tank, assure long running between fills.

It also features a synchromesh, 12F/4R transmission with a speed range of 1.3 to 18.6 mph and a wide choice of gears in the working range to handle all types of jobs. Hydraulically actuated brakes and large front tires give execllent maneuverability in all applications.

Tandem hydraulic pumps are direct engine driven with total capacity of 18.4 gpm. The high flow rate, combined with the powerful Deutz Transfermatic 3-point lift system, make this tractor a superb performer with 3-point mounted implements or front loader. Its 95-in. wheelbase and favorable weight distribution give the D 7807 stability and performance characteristics of tractors beyond its size.

Deutz-Fahr air-cooled diesel tractors are sold through more than 380 dealers in North America, backed by computerized parts distributions and service backup through regional offices in Atlanta, Ga., Davenport, Iowa, Columbus, Ohio, and Regina, Sask. Deutz-Fahr tractors previously were known as Deutz trators; Deutz-Fahr hay tools were previously marketed under the brand name "Fahr" through the same regional and dealer organization. All these products will now be identified as Deutz-Fahr. They are products of the KHD Group, parent company of Deutz Corporation.

Humane announces new mat for farrowing crates

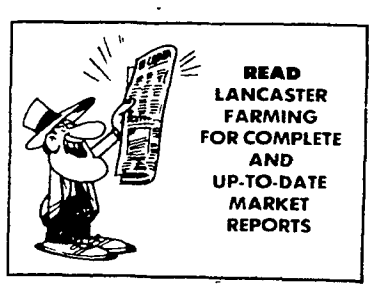
BARABOO, Wics. — Humane Equipment Co. has announced a new farrowing mat designed specifically for elevated type farrowing crates.

The mat, made of compressed, reprocessed rubber is reinforced internally with zinc plated, 5 ga. woven wire grating in the sow area, and 5/16" steel rodding in the creep area.

The textured surface of these mats provides surer footing while the resiliency of the mat eliminates leg stiffness, reduces stress, and provides added comfort for sows in gestation stalls and farrowing stalls. According to the Company, the mats virtually eliminate knee abrasion problems for sows and baby pigs and provide added warmth by reducing effects of draft.

These non-porous mats are both easy to clean and disinfect. Available in standard 4' x 5' and 4' x 6' sizes. Custom sizes also available to fit individual requirements.

Complete information is available from Humane Equipment Co., P.O.Box 24, Baraboo, WI 53913.



Pioneer head calls for food-ag coalition

DES MOINES, Ia. — The head of a major seed company today urged U.S. corn growers to reduce corn acreage in 1983 – and to join forces with agriculture-related companies in order to develop more realistic food policies.

Thomas N. Urban, president and chief executive officer of Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., told an American Agricultural Law Association meeting here that "while many industries are in financial trouble because of low productivity, farmers are being penalized for being too efficient. In view of two back-to-back bumper crops, we believe it is preferable to store excess capacity in the form of land rather than as grain."

Urban called for a new food and agriculture coalition to develop realistic food and agriculture policies. But he cautioned that many farmers cannot wait for long-term solutions. Two consecutive record crops of corn, wheat and soybeans as well as reduced exports of corn have pushed farm prices to disastrously low levels, Urban said.

"Today's farm productivity is the result of farmers' willingness and ability to invest in technology," Urban said. "Future productivity gains in agriculture could be jeopardized unless farmers earn enough so that they can afford to buy the technology needed to keep productivity rising."

Urban commended the U.S. Department of Agriculture for its early announcement of the 1983 program to reduce crop acreage. He was not optimistic, however, that the program will attract enough participants to reduce corn acreage as much as it should be cut.

"We need an 8 to 10 percent cut in 1983 corn acreage to produce a crop of about 7 billion bushels, compared to 8.2 and 8.3 billion bushels in 1981 and '82," Urban said. Coupled with aggressive export promotion, such a crop reduction would help the U.S. work its way out of the current price-depressing surplus.

Longer range, Urban said, farmers and those who supply agricultural inputs and who transport, process and market food should work together to develop and influence farm policy.

"Agriculture has evolved over the past 60 years from an occupation that everyone thought they understood, that we thought was relatively isolated from international events, into a very complex, specialized, highly capital intensive international business whose overseas sales make up about 20 percent of this country's total exports," Urban

"Unfortunately, our system for making farm policy hasn't changed. We have not recognized the changed character of food production," Urban said. As a result, he said, the U.S. lacks a clear policy that recognizes the new realities of food production. "We are in danger of squandering our food production advantages because our political system seems unable to recognize change," Urban declared.

"I believe that the time is now at hand for both farmers and those of us who sell to or buy from farmers to reexamine our relationship," Urban declared. "It is time for a new food and agriculture coalition."

Agencies of government other than the USDA are making food and agriculture policy without consulting agriculture or, in some cases, without even realizing the effect of their decisions on the U.S. food system, according to Urban.

Urban cited a number of issues on which he thinks a majority of U.S. farmers and agri-business firms can agree. Among these are the need to increase farm exports, conserve soil and water, permit continued use of fertilizer and pesticides to increase efficiency, encourage industry to develop new technology and streamline FDA procedures for labeling, packaging and new product development.

"The U.S. currently has a clear competitive advantage in food production," Urban pointed out. "We also need to sell goods overseas in order to pay for what we import. Thus, I believe most people favor agricultural exports as long as they do not reduce domestic supplies to the point that prices here are driven up significantly."

He cited a recent study by Chase Econometrics forecasters, funded by Pioneer, which showed that U.S. agriculture's productivity would permit grain exports to increase significantly with only minimal effects on domestic food prices.

"While we hear that one farmer feeds 78 people, I believe that we may have as many people involved in the food system today as we had 25 years ago," Urban said. "They are just not on the farm. They are in heavy manufacturing, chemical plants, food processing plants, trucking firms, paper mills, advertising companies, electronics firms and fast food operations...as well as hundreds of other off-farm activities. This doesn't mean farmers are any less efficient; it simply recognizes that they invest a lot of capital in technology which is now produced off the farm," he said.

"I believe that all of us – including consumers – are looking for the same thing for agriculture, namely policies which allow U.S. farmers to produce as efficiently as they can, earning a return that allows them to continue investing in even better technology," Urban said. "That has to be good for all of us."

JUST LISTEN TO WHAT THESE AG-BAG BELIEVERS HAVE TO SAY:

Kenneth Popham of Floresville, Texas

Kenneth runs a 465 cow Dairy and said this about AG-BAG: "At today's interest rates you can't afford any other type of storage... Even with the yearly cost of bags it's still inexpensive storage... a whole lot cheaper than building barns and hiring help. I put up 13 bags last year and after seeing the results, I'll put up 25 bags this year. The bags are a good thing."

Don Carter of Parkdale, Oregon

"The best move I ever made"... says Don Carter in reference to his switch to bagging silage on his dairy near Parkdale, Oregon.

"I get 18% more feed from the same acreage and the feed lasts three times as long. I used to clean my bunks after three days, now I only need to clean them after 10 days."

Roland Rasmussen of Blair, Nebraska

Roland farms 350 acres west of Blair, Nebraska, and fattens about 650 cattle from 600 lbs. to finish.

"By labeling every bag as to date and kind of feed, I can mix my feeds and eliminate the guess work in making a ration. I feed alfalfa silage, corn silage and ground ear corn stored exclusively in the bags, purchasing only my minerals and vitamin supplements."

"The AG-BAG system has enabled me to increase carrying capacity per acre at a reduced cost of gain."

Bert Anderson of Sceptre, Saskatchewan

"At least 30% more feed... I can guarantee at least that". says rancher, Bert Anderson, of Sceptre, Saskatchewan.

"I've been able to cut my grain feeding costs in half since converting to the bagging. It's just like feeding grass. I've also eliminated the need for a liquid supplement that we always fed before going to the AG-BAG System .."

Penn State farm shops booklet available

UNIVERSITY PARK — All farms need a shop. Equipment maintenance and various construction projects are as much a part of farming as tillage and harvesting.

Many useful repair and building projects can be completed during bad weather in a shop. It needs areas for metal work and machinery work and repair. Often a woodworking area is needed. Each area recipes different tools, but they all should be properly stored within easy reach. A good layout locates the tools close to where they will be used.

"Planning Farm Shops" is a new booklet that will help in the design of an efficient shop. It includes a unique set of teamplates that make it easy to plan a shop layout for any farm. In addition, dozens of tool storage ideas are illustrated and explained.

Other chapters cover construction details and recommendations for electrical power, lighting, heating, plumbing and ventilation. A complete list recommends the tools needed for each shop function.

This booklet is available for $2 from Penn State Cooperative Extension Service county offices or you may order it direct from NRAES, 204 Agricultural Engineering Building, University Park, PA 16802. Make check payable to The Pennsylvania State University.

NEDCO vows to fight 50-cent penalty

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Planned government cuts in dairy farmer income and a chilling economy didn't sour the spirits of nearly 700 members and guests of the Northeast Dairy Cooperative Federation, who crowded into the Hotel Syracuse's new Imperial Ballroom on September 28 and 29 for the co-op's 17th Annual Meeting and banquet.

In his annual message to the members, President McNamara reviewed several major decisions made by NEDCO management and delegates that have directly contributed to the success the co-op is enjoying.

"During the past fiscal year — April 1, 1982 to April 1, 1982 — a number of actions have been taken to strengthen NEDCO financially as well as in marketing capability; probably more than in any other recent year," he said.

Some of those important decisions include: A member equity program; a plan to redeem certificates of equity; purchase of the Dellwood milk manufacturing facility at Fraser, N.Y.; and subsequent invitation to Dellwood producers to become NEDCO members; and a move to new corporate headquarters in Syracuse.

According to McNamara, there were also many important national dairy issues that had to be dealt with during the past year; chief of which is the cost of the support price program and excessive Commodity Credit Corporation purchases of dairy products.

"National Milk Producers Federation, NEDCO and other cooperatives worked long and hard to develop a program which they felt would maintain producer income at a reasonable level, cut back propduction and relieve the CCC program costs," he said.

"it was turned down by Congress and the Administration, in favor of a two-time 50-cent milkcheck deduction plan, a plan we feel will only encourage higher production by farmers who must meet their financial committments each month," said the NEDCO executive.

"We will fight against the 50-cent plan to the end," he vowed at the close of the two-day meeting. "The Secretary has discretionary power to impose the deduction, he is not mandated by Congress to carry it out."

Reflecting the gathered financial strength of the cooperative since 1975, McNamara told the delegates that NEDCO assets in the 1982 fiscal year totalled $36 million, up from $19.25 million the previous year and up from $4.3 million in 1975. Even more dramatic were increases in the organization's equity position, up from "a minus $128,000 in 1975 to $5.69 million in 1982 fiscal year," he said.

McNamara added that NEDCO had added 11 new local cooperatives since 1981 and has made good on market guarantees and milk check guarantees at a reasonable dues cost.

Election of officers for the large cooperative followed the two-days of dairy information and discussion. Late Wednesday afternoon the NEDCO Board of Directors re-elected all members of the executive committee: Edward McNamara, Canajohrie, N.Y., is president; Leo Briggs, Arkport, N.Y., is vice president; Glenn Brown, Jr., Randolph, N.Y., will again serve as secretary; R. Fenton Murphy, Ulster, Pa., is

Penn Nat'l Horse Show features Canadian "Mounties"

HARRISBURG — The Royal Canadian Mounted Police will return to the State Farm Show Arena, Harrisburg, for three days — Monday through Wednesday — during the 27th annual Pennsylvania National Horse Show. The show will be held Thursday, Oct. 14 through Saturday, Oct. 23.

"It's an all new performance with all new riders since we last came to Harrisburg in 1979," said Inspector Albert L. Anderson, Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

According to Anderson, 36 riders including one woman, and 40 horses will be coming to Harrisburg to perform the world-famous "Musical Ride." Only 33 riders, dressed in traditional Mounted Police garb, will put their mounts through the intricate movements accompanied by music.

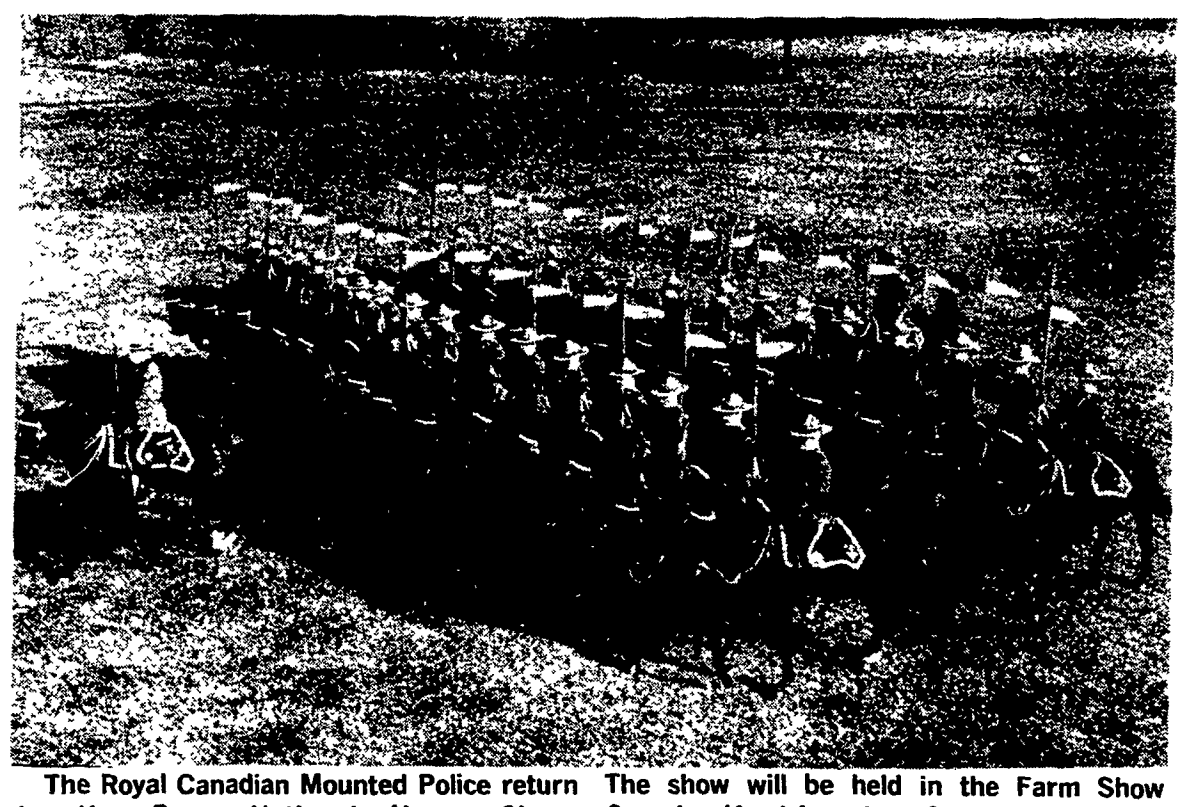
"The average age of our riders is 22 years," continued the Inspector, "while the average age of our horses is 4 years."

All of the horses used by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police are coal black thoroughbreds, raised especially for the "Musical Ride" at the RCMP post near Ottawa.

The Mounted Police are a Canadian tradition, dating back to 1873 when the force was established as the Northwest Mounted Police. During the early days, they dealt with Indian tribes and illegal whiskey-traders. They also served as the only police force in the Canadian Arctic.

Legend has it that the "Musical Ride" was first performed by the Mounted Police in 1876. The first documented performance, however, took place in 1887.

The Mounties, with their scarlet tunics, Stetson hats and 9-foot lances are quite an impressive sight. This is especially true at the highlight of their performance when they lower their lances and "Charge!"



The Royal Canadian Mounted Police return to the Penn National Horse Show, Monday, Oct. 18 through Wednesday, Oct. 20. The show will be held in the Farm Show Complex, Harrisburg from Oct. 14-23.

The Pennsylvania National Horse Show also features ladies' barrel racing, high goal polo and the Pennsylvania Big Jump. The week comes to a climax closing Saturday evening with the exciting Grand Prix de Penn National, a "World Cup" qualifying event.

Tickets are available by calling 717/233-1335. The cost for general admission is $3.50. Reserved seating and box seats are $5 and $6 respectively.

The Pennsylvania National Horse Show is a benefit for the Kiwanis Youth Foundation, Inc.

Wheat conference to target future priorities

BELTSVILLE, Md. — More than 500 agricultural researchers, officials and wheat growers are expected here Oct. 26 for a three-day conference to help establish the priorities for wheat-related research in the immediate future and to recognize significant recent achievements in cereal production research.

The theme of this first National Wheat Research Conference is "Wheat Research: Today's Investment, Tomorrow's Hope."

Byrd Curtis, director of wheat programs, International Maize and Wheat Improvement Center, Mexico City, will deliver the keynote address. The meeting is sponsored by the National Association of Wheat Growers Foundation in cooperation with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service and the National Wheat Improvement Committee.

"Research allows growers to maintain a comparative advantage while working to expand market opportunities," said Leland Briggle, National Research Program Leader for Cereal Crops, ARS and conference co-chairman. "Research also directly benefits domestic and foreign consumers by improving the quality of the end product and by tailoring the raw commodity to new products."

He added that the current surplus should not be seen as normal. It can and should be drawn down sharply when the end of the worldwide recession allows foreign buyers — two thirds of the U.S. wheat growers' market — to resume their cash purchases.

Curtis is past chairman of the National Wheat Improvement Committee. From 1975 to 1981 he was manager of hybrid small grain breeding for Cargill, Inc. He will present his keynote address at 9 a.m. on Oct. 26 in the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center Auditorium.

A luncheon on Oct. 27 will honor O.A. Vogel, retired research professor, Washington State University, for his work in developing high-yielding, short-straw wheat. Sen. Mark Andrews (R-N.D), a member of the agriculture, appropriations and budget committees, will speak at the evening banquet.

Because such a large proportion of the research aimed at improving wheat productivity to meet future worldwide food demands is funded or guided by the federal government, the conference's first morning will be devoted to the federal budget process and its effect on ARS, state agricultural experiment stations, state wheat commissions and private industry.

The afternoon of Oct. 26 and the morning of Oct. 27 will be devoted to presentations and panel discussions of ongoing research in: soil conservation and cultural practices; germplasm (plant genes); disease and insect control through breeding; chemical and biological control of weeds, diseases and pests; hybrids and progress in use of growth regulators; tolerance to drought, heat and cold, and improvement of wheat quality.

The afternoon of the second day will feature workshops on those areas of research. T.B. Kinney, Jr., administrator of ARS, will summarize the views of the conference at a 10 a.m. session Oct. 28.

That summary is intended to help guide the Congress and Executive Branch in assessing wheat research priorities, based on the views of professional researchers aided by grower impact and others in the wheat industry, conference sponsers said.

Lanc. Poultry Assn. banquet Oct. 28

LANCASTER — The Annual Banquet Meeting of the Lancaster County Poultry Association will be held Thursday, Oct. 28 at 6:30 p.m. at the Good 'N Plenty Restaurant, Route 896, Smoketown.

A brief business meeting will include the election of four directors.

Tickets for the evening are available from members. Price for tickets is $10. For more information, contact Richard Meck, president, 88 Diller Ave., New Holland; telephone 354-7944.

Pa. youth win champion honors in market lamb competition

TIMONIUM, Md. — Youthful Pennsylvania exhibitors traveled home from last week's Eastern National Livestock Show, held here at the Maryland State Fairgrounds, with several championships won during the market lamb competition.

Lancaster County's Barbara Herr, Narvon, exhibited her first-place Suffolk x Hampshire crossbred lamb in the 108-113 pound class to the championship of the Crossbred show. She also took reserve champion honors in the combined Dorset, Cheviot, Southdown, Montadale, Shropshire and Corriedale show. Her Dorset entry in the 125-126 pound class copped the top honors. The lamb was bred by Nix-Besser Farm, the Robert Herr family.

Julie Kuzemchak of Pleasant Gap, Centre County, won the reserve champion Hampshire honors with her heavyweight lamb. The reserve champ, which placed second in class to the Hampshire champion lamb, was bred by Clyde Brubaker of Lancaster.

It was a banner week for John Shroyer of DeGraff, Ohio as he captured the championship honors in the Hampshire and the Dorset, Cheviot, Southdown, Montadale, Shropshire and Corriedale market lamb shows. Shroyer's entries were tagged reserve champion in the Suffolk and Crossbred competition. His reserve Suffolk champion was named reserve grand champion market lamb overall.

Christopher Freeman of Huntertown, Indiana, exhibited his heavyweight Suffolk lamb to champion honors in its breed and to the grand championship of last week's show.

Judge for the 4-H and FFA market lamb shows was Calvin Alford of Colbert, Georgia.

Genetics Unlimited Shows grand champion Angus female

TIMONIUM, Md. — An April junior yearling Angus heifer shown by Genetics Unlimited and Rishels Edlyn Farm of West Grove, Pennsylvania, claimed the junior champion female honors at last week's Eastern National Livestock Show here at the state fairgrounds and later went on to be tagged grand champion female by judge Gary Dameron of Lexington, Ill.

Standing at the top of her 19-head class, Edlyns Lady Evelyn 101, an April 28, 1981 PS Power Play daughter, was on her way to winning the coveted female title of the black beef breed.

A Pennsylvania Angus breeder also took champion honors in the bull competition. Pat-Ric's Farm and Lee Powell of Lehigh County showed their two year old to the reserve senior championship.

The Timpte Twins are Tough.

Got Grain? Then get the trailers that are Timpte tough... the Super Hopper or the level floor Super Grain Trailer. They're not only built to take it... they're also built to cut fuel costs. The Super Hopper and the level floor Super Grain Trailers are lightweight and aerodynamically designed to reduce wind drag. When there's grain to be hauled, Timpte does the haulin' best and pulls a lot easier than the rest.

Swab test for antibiotics expands to all meat, poultry

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Beginning Oct. 20, U.S. Department of Agriculture meat and poultry inspectors will be able to use a rapid analytical test to detect antibiotic residues in all species of animals.

"Expanding the use of the swab test will speed the inspection process and enhance USDA's ability to assure the wholesomeness of meat and poultry," said Donald L. Houston, administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service. "We are also cooperating with producer organizations in educational programs that will reduce the possibility of harmful residues, which provides further consumer protection.

"USDA has used the rapid test — called STOP for 'swab test on premises' — since 1979 on dairy cow carcasses. It will now be available for use on all meat and poultry carcasses under federal inspection," said Houston.

"The swab test reveals within 18 hours whether there are antibiotic residues in carcasses," Houston said. "By comparison, it presently takes one to two weeks to complete laboratory analyses."

Carcasses showing no antibiotics can move into commerce without delay, Houston said, while those in which antibiotics are detected are retained by USDA for further testing. When violative levels are found, the carcasses cannot be used as food.

"Since USDA began using the rapid test on dairy cows, antibiotic residue violations have declined dramatically, due largely to the cooperative efforts of USDA and dairy producer organizations," Houston said. "By practicing good management procedures, including using medications according to label instructions during the period before animals were marketed, producers were able to reduce costly violations and delays.

"Antibiotic violations for cows dropped from 3.7 percent in 1978 to 0.6 percent — about half of one percent — in 1981. For most other meat and poultry, violations range from 0.2 to 2.7 percent," Houston said.

To perform the test, inspectors insert sterile swabs into liver or kidney tissue and place them on a microbiological plate coated with harmless organisms. The plate is incubated overnight.

When antibiotics are present, bacterial growth is stopped around the swab tips, indicating the need for further analysis before the carcass can leave the plant.

In contrast, when the carcass is free of antibiotics, bacteria grow uniformly right up to the swab tips, and the inspector can approve the carcass.

The final rule expanding use of the slaughterhouse testing program was published in the Sept. 20 Federal Register. After proposing this rule March 12, USDA received 10 comments, with six favoring the proposal.

"The issues most often raised concerned test accuracy and processing delays," Houston said. "The swab test program for cows has shown the in-plant procedure actually speeds inspection. And the accuracy of the swab test has been confirmed in USDA field service laboratories, where is has been used as a screening test for the past five to six years."

PGC's Bowers receives award

HILTON HEAD, SC — The Executive Director of the Pennsylvania Game Commission, Glenn L. Bowers, has been named recipient of the Seth Gordon Award, the highest tribute paid a wildlife professional by the International Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies. The award was presented to Bowers at the conclusion of the Association's annual convention at Hilton Head, South Carolina.

Bowers, who will retire in December, has been Executive Director of the Game Commission since 1965. Earlier he served as deputy director and as Chief of the Division of Research. He joined the Game Commission in 1948 following graduation from Penn State as a wildlife biologist.

The Seth Gordon Award was created by the I.A.F.W.A. a number of years ago to recognize outstanding leaders in the field of wildlife management. It's named for Seth Gordon, himself a longtime leader in the field of conservation, who twice served as executive director of the Pennsylvania Game Commission (1919 - 1926 and 1936 - 1948); was director of the California Fish and Game Department; and served as Director of the Izaak Walton League. Gordon, now 92, resides in Sacremento.

IAFWA officials, in presenting the Gordon Award to Mr. Bowers, noted that both men are former presidents of the International Association. The award reads: "In Recognition of Professionalism, Integrity, and Leadership in Wildlife Management and Services to the Association." The award is in the form of a Steuben crystal owl sitting atop a walnut base.

The occasion in South Carolina marks the third time in two years that Director Bowers has been honored with a major award. In 1981 he received the coveted John Pearce Memorial Award presented by the Northeast Section of the Wildlife Society. And earlier this year, in Milwaukee, he was named the 1982 Wildlife Conservationist of the Year by the National Wildlife Federation.

Bowers, a native of York, attended Penn State from 1939 until 1942 when he became a Marine aviator. As a fighter pilot, he flew 86 combat missions in the South Pacific as a member of the famed Black Sheep Squadron. Discharged with the rank of captain, he returned to Penn State and completed graduate studies in 1948 with a master's degree in wildlife biology. He then joined the Game Commission.

Serving in various capacities, Bowers is credited with conducting pioneer research on cottontail rabbits and with implementing one of the finest whitetail deer management programs in the nation. He has maintained an ongoing land acquisition movement which has netted almost 1.25 million acres of state game lands for Pennsylvania sportsmen.

He was the prime developer of a professional forestry staff within the Division of Land Management, and under his leadership, the highly successful SPORT and Working Together for Wildlife programs were conceived and initiated. Since their inspection, both programs have been adopted by numerous other state wildlife management agencies.

An avid hunter of both large and small game and waterfowl, Bowers is equally at home in the field or in the office. He administers one of the largest wildlife management agencies in the country, with over 700 full-time employees and a $32 million dollar annual budget.

Extension rep cites swine oral larvicide

NEWARK, Del. — In June the Environmental Protection Agency approved the insecticide Rabon for use as a swine feed additive, much to the delight of hog producers with fly problems.

Frank Boys, extension entomologist at the University of Delaware, says the product, Swine Oral Larvicide, which contains Rabon as its active ingredient, prevents the development of house fly larvae in the manure of treated swine. The manufacturer of the larvicide, Diamond Shamrock, claims its product is 93 percent to 99 percent effective in reducing fly emergence in manure when used as recommended.

The insecticide is administered to hogs as a feed additive. It passes through the digestive system and into the manure, where it kills fly larvae soon after eggs hatch.

Swine Oral Laricide is effective only against fly larvae that develop in the manure of treated animals. It is not effective against existing flies. Boys recommends different controls for adult flies from other sources. He emphasizes good management and sanitation practices for optimum fly control.

All swine should be treated with the larvicide. Start feeding it in early spring before flies appear and continue treatment until cold weather restricts fly activity. Preblend it with ground grain, protein supplements or mineral mixes before adding it to the complete ration. Do not mix it with pelleted feeds or feeds that are mostly pellets.

Since no withholding period is required, the insecticide may be fed up to slaughter.

Swine Oral Larvicide should be available from local feed dealers and cooperatives. Read and follow label directions concerning its use, handling, storage and disposal. Rabon previously was cleared for use in an oral larvicide for beef and dairy cattle and horses.

Managing small woodlots

UNIVERSITY PARK — Managing even a small woodlot can be confusing and seemingly overwhelming, says James Finley, Penn State Extension forestry specialist. Setting realistic financial and management objectives requires an understanding of forestry management.

Finley cites the example of an owner trying to grow walnut trees in shallow soil and Douglas fir Christmas trees in poorly drained soil. Neither of the planting did well, however, some simple management techniques may have avoided the poor planting.

Examining the existing vegetation in your woodlot will give you some cutting and planting clues.

Initial management activities should begin on better sites. For instance, if your idea is to produce firewood to heat your home from thinking your woodlot, then your land would benefit most by thinning the better sites first. Trees on these better sites will respond quickly by filling in the holes you create in the forest canopy: thus growing faster in diameter.

To recognize these better sites, foresters look at tree height and age. Tree height is more related to age than anything else, while diameter is not strongly related to age. Knowing this you would look for areas with tall trees as opposed to areas with short trees of the same age.

To find help in classifying the parts of sites in your woodlot, check your county soil survey to find out what your soils are capable of providng. Ask your county or state forester to assist you in developing a management plan that helps you use your land wisely to meet your financial and management objectives.

The Shorthorn competition found Pennsylvania breeder, Woodside Farm of R3 Waynesburg, copping the championship honors. Calves by Arcadia Champagne III and JAF Major Duke 78 brought $350, $400 and $425.

And in the Chianina class, Y-Not Farms of Dayton showed its Lombard get for still another Pennsylvania-won championship. The March and April calves brought $510, $575, and $610 at Saturday's auction.

The reserve champion Chianina pen shown by Oldfield Cattle Co. of Galena, Md. had the distinction of including the top-selling feeder calf. One of the get of Whitewood Answer 5M brought the high bid of $700 while its pen mates commanded $625 and $500.

Branchwater Farms of Owings Mill, Md. had the champion pen of Angus calves. Two sold for $400 while the third brought $525.

Hallowell to consider changes in dairy support price

HARRISBURG — State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell, this week, called a meeting of state dairymen to consider modifications to a federal regulation which would deduct 50 cents per hundredweight from dairy farmers' milk checks to offset the costs of the dairy price support program.

In a letter to dairy industry leaders, Hallowell said, "I am concerned that this program will do little to solve the existing difficulties within the Pennsylvania dairy industry. I am not satisfied that this action will provide a solution to the dairy surplus problem."

Under the Congressionally authorized proposal, USDA Secretary John Block has announced the collection of funds from dairy farmers at a rate of 50 cents per hundredweight on all milk marketed. This dairy price support deduction is authorized under the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1982, with collections scheduled to begin Dec. 1.

The act requires the funds be sent to the Commodity Credit Corporation to help offset a portion of the costs of purchases of surplus dairy products.

Hallowell noted that federal law provides a 45-day comment period for input and proposed changes to the regulations, ending Nov. 8. He said that the meeting would focus on comments and ideas which the Pennsylvnaia Department of Agriculture might suggest to Secretary Block in modifying the program to benefit dairy farmers.

Hallowell said the meeting has been scheduled for Oct. 19 at 1 p.m. at the Americana's Host Corral, Lancaster, to provide time for preparing recommendations to USDA within the 45-day comment period.

N.Y. Beef Cattlemen's sales feature preconditioned calves

DRYDEN, N.Y. — Preconditioning is a word used more and more by commercial cow/calf producers and by feedlot operators in New York state, especially when the fall feeder calf sale time approaches.

Preconditioned feeder calves are those that have been weaned 30 days prior to sale; vaccinated against specific respiratory diseases not less than 21 nor more than 30 days prior to sale; fed roughage in a bunk-like feeder and watered from a mechanical source for 30 days prior to sale; and treated for grubs.

For the second consecutive year one of the New York Beef Cattlemen's Association sponsored feeder calf sales, the Central Division Sale at Dryden Nov. 12 will accept only preconditoined calves. The other four New York Beef Cattlemen's Association sponsored feeder calf sales will give special designation to the preconditioned calves. These sales are the Southwestern Division Nov. 6 at Angelica, the Eastern Division Nov. 6 at Chatham; the Southern Tier Division Nov. 13 at Bath; and the Western Division Nov. 20 at Caledonia.

Preconditioned calves are being recognized by feedlot operators and other buyers as less subject to stress than those calves that are weaned off the cows, placed on a truck and delivered to a sale.

A study in Iowa shows death loss is markedly reduced when calves have been preconditioned; that 93 percent of the sale lots of preconditioned calves reported no sickness and no problems in getting calves started on feed; and that 92 per cent of the cattle feeders said they would recommend preconditioned calves to other feeders.

The feeder calf sales are a major program of the N.Y. Cattlemen's organization. Calves are sold in uniform lots at auction. Groups are sorted by grade, weight, breed, and sex. All calves and yearlings are either dehorned or polled. Weight divisions range from 300-800 pounds and all heifers are guaranteed open. Single animals may be purchased as well as lots.

In recognition of the importance of the commercial producers to the overall beef cattle industry several breed associations recognize consignors of top pens of calves. The New York Angus Association, the New York Hereford Association, the New York Shorthorn Association, and the New York Simmental Association award banners for the best pen of five of their respective breed at each sale. The awards are based on total weight of the five heaviest calves in a consignment grading L1 or M1. The Colonial Charolais Association will award a $50 savings bond to the top pen of five Charolais calves at the fall sales.

Information about consigning to any of the fall sales may be obtained from Robert Good, R1, Perry, N.Y. 14530.

New York Shorthorns shine at Eastern National

TIMONIUM, Md. — T.H. Snethen, a Shorthorn exhibitor from Dewittville, N.Y. claimed Grand Champion female honors in recent Eastern National competition.

D.S. Miss Michelle, an April 1981 yearling earlier was named Junior Champion female before moving on to the Grand Champion spot. She is sired by Highfield Rathcannon.

Snethen's calf champion, Sangamon Jennifer Brook, sired by GX Spiro's Plumber collected Reserve Grand Champion honors.

Sangamon Superman, Snethen's senior yearling bull claimed Reserve Grand Champion Bull honors. The reserve champ also was sired by GX Spiro's Plumber.

A Thornwood Major son, HF Major Star, walked off with Grand Champion Bull honors. The champion 2-year-old was exhibited by Ben-Har Farm of Woodbine, Md.

A second Thornwood Major son, exhibited by Ben-Har, went on to claim Junior Champion Bull honors. Ben-Har Southern Major earlier topped his Summer Yearling class.

Exhibitors Rhonda and Terry Kibler had a successful day with their young bulls. K-Defender, the Kibler's winter bull calf, claimed Calf Champion honors, while their senior bull calf, K-Albo, followed with the Reserve Calf Champion title.

Pennsylvania breeders Woodside Farm, Waynesburg collected Reserve Junior Champion honors with their late spring yearling Woodside Cynthia Rose 6th, a Maybe Major daughter.

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett

Which personal computer?

Last week I wrote about the application of Visi Calc with personal computers for on farm use. The four programs I have explored so far are farm analysis, cash flow, budgets, and amortization tables. Actually anything you can do with a calculatior you can do with a Visi Calc. It may even be feasible to tie a record keeping system into the program. This will take some study.

What kind of computer

There are a lot of personal computers around and it appears as though they are becoming engaged in a price war. My suggestions would be: buy local or nearby so you have someone who can service the equipment; buy one that has a Visi Calc program that can be used with it; and look into the availability of other agricultural programs or software that can be used on the machine.

Now for some quasi-technical items. You don't have to understand the jargon but it helps. Visi Calc takes 30K of memory for itself. I found that the farm analysis program I did took 17K of memory. One of the amortization programs took 24K of memory.

What does that mean? That means that you probably should look for a machine that has at least 48K of memory. Then I would suggest getting a card to give you another 16K. This would mean that you would have a total of 64K of memory. Most of the programs you would want to run would then be possible. Example: Visi Calc plus farm analysis requires 47K or Visi Calc plus a 25 year amortization program requires 54K.

What else?

The computer package usually includes a computer, a monitor, a disc drive, various attachments called interfaces for use between the computer and disc drive or printer, and one or more basic programs. I think you would find a printer useful and for larger programs such as the farm analysis, one would be essential.

Some suggestions based on a short-time personal experience:

- Get a computer with at least 48K memory.
- Get a card that will add 16K to this memory.
- Get a green and black monitor rather than black and white because it is easier on the eyes.
- Use diskettes (use in disc drive) rather than tapes.
- Get a printer. They range in quality and price. Some print like a typewriter (they're more expensive) and some print in dots (they're cheaper). Ask for a demonstration.
- Decide on what you want to print out before getting a printer. I wouldn't get anything that would print less than an 8-inch sheet. That size would do nicely for a farm analysis or an amoritization schedule. The standard sized computer paper used by large computers is 14 inches. The cost will be 50 to 60 percent more but may be worth it.
- Get the Visi Calc program suitable for your computer.

Cost?

Sale cost for the total package will probably be between $2,100 and $4,500 depending on the model, the dealer, and the quality of accessories. Is it worth it? Probably not if you do not intend to use it; perhaps if you use it in your farm business. Really only you can answer this (and of course your children who will probably use it more than you).

Leading agricultural spokesmen to address Md. Ag Forum

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — The nation's former soil conservation leader and a leading land-grant college administrator will be keynote speakers at the 17th annual Maryland Agricultural Leaders Forum here Nov. 4.

Norman A. Berg, former chief of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service will discuss "The Role of Agriculture in America's Future." Berg is now senior advisor to the American Farmland Trust, headquartered in Washington D.C.

James H. Anderson, dean of the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources at Michigan State University, will present at the forum "The Role of the Agricultural University in the Future." Anderson is co-chairman of the nation's Joint Council on Food and Agricultural Sciences, established by Congress in 1977. He is the former director of the Mississippi State University Agricultural Experiment Station.

The Maryland Agricultural Leaders Forum provides a setting for leading producers, consumers, educators and scientists to address and plan for agriculture's major challenges.

Last year's theme — "Challenges for Tomorrow's Agriculture" — is repeated this year with a different emphasis, according to Donald A. Hegwood, new dean of the College of Agriculture at the University of Maryland.

"Last year, forum speakers attempted to identify those problems facing agriculture at the state, national and international levels," Hegwood said. "This year, speakers will outline what is being done to address those challenges."

Other highlights of the forum include:

*Presentations by university administrators on education, extension and research programs at the University of Maryland;

*Educational exhibits by the University's Cooperative Extension Service and Agricultural Experiment Station;

*Video presentations of three examples of research by the Agricultural Experiment Station;

*Presentations of certificates of merit to four Maryland residents for "significant contributions to the state's agricultural, seafood and food processing industries, and family life."

The location of the forum is on the main university campus at College Park in the Center of Adult Education. It begins at 9:45 a.m. Formal presentations are scheduled for the Firefighters Room and exhibits will be displayed in Room 0123 at the Center.

A registration fee of $16, paid before Oct. 28, covers the cost of the luncheon and a copy of the Forum proceedings.

Registration after Oct. 28, or on the day of the Forum, will be $20 per person and will not guarantee a luncheon reservation.

Capons On Range Need Grit

If capons are allowed to range outside from July through October, they ought to have granite grit fed to them on top of feed at a rate of one handful per 25 birds once a week. This prevents crop binding when birds forage for clover, grass or alfalfa.

Crop binding also may occur from wild cherry seeds or green cherries. So prevent capons from ranging around trees where seeds or green cherries may be a problem. Do not feed calcium grit to capons.

If the crop of the capon becomes full of any fibrous material which will not pass through it, the bird will become weak and die due to lack of feed. Feed cannot pass through a bound crop.

So range capons only if they are fed granite or insoluable grit. Feed capons only enough grower feed that they can clean up in 2 hours when on range, and keep fresh pure water available to capons at all times.

Crop binding can be prevented through good management of birds.

DAIRY GOATS
Up To $30/CWT Being Paid For Goat Milk

Clean and easy to handle, goats produce about one fifth as much milk as a cow. They readily adapt to parlor and machine milking and conversion of most existing barns and parlors to handle goats is easily accomplished. Each free stalled goat requires fifteen square feet of sheltered space and twenty five square feet of outdoor paddock space A good dairy goat may consume three pounds of 16% grain mix and five pounds of legume or mixed hay, to produce nearly a gallon of milk per day average over a 305 day lactation. Since goats are seasonal breeders a lighting program extending the days is often used in the late winter to achieve fall freshenings to produce more of the high priced winter milk. Bulk pickups of minimum 1600 lb loads can be arranged within 150 miles of central New Jersey. Contracts are presently available for several farms willing to eventually milk at least 100 head, to begin shipping milk in 1983.

The satisfaction that comes from doing a good job of farming

Liming is one of the most important factors in keeping your soil in the highest productive range. A good pasture with a pH of 6 5 or higher, for example, will make 300 to 400 lbs. of beef per acre and produce up to $100 gross income per acre This means with the help of lime, profits from pastures can compare favorably with feed or grain crops.

Conservation tillage cost less than $3 an acre

HARRISBURG — Soil erosion may no longer be an expensive problem in some places. "Conservation tillage costs $3 or less per acre to farm as conventional tillage on many soils. The reduction in soil erosion is phenomenal — 50 percent - 90 percent. In combination with other practices, it can do even better," says Peter C. Myers, chief of the USDA Soil Conservation Service.

No till and minimum tillage are the fastest growing soil conservation practices in Pennsylvania. Graham T. Munkittrick, state conservationist in Pennsylvania, states that over one-half million acres of corn and soybeans were planted by conservation tillage methods in this state in 1982.

New data from the Department of Agriculture, shows that concervation farming is not only less expensive but feasible in more places than expected.

"Soil and water conservation becomes more than just a good idea for the future and the folks downstream," Myers said. "It can save farmers money right now. It will also save their soil and increase production."

Excessive soil erosion caused by water and wind hurt productivity on one of every three cropland acres in the United States. Myers said, "SCS is always looking for better ways to control soil erosion."
